GIRL HELD CAPTIVE IN N. Y. DYING

Montreal Young Woman Escapes from Abductors; Tells of Frightful Tortures.

SALOON OWNERS HELD

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Unconscious and probably dying, a nineteen-year-old girl, who says she is Adelaide de Hunt of Montreal, is at the Williamsburg Hospital, while the police of the Clymer street station have in custody Carl and Mary Hansen, owners of a saloon from which the girl declared she escaped.

The girl's body is covered with bruises, which, she told the police, were due to beatings administered by Hansen and his wife. Coroner's Physician Weast, before the girl lapsed into unconsciousness, took her ante-mortem statement.

Lured to Tenth Street House.

She said she came from her home in Montreal last week to visit a brother who is a captain of one of the Joy line steamers and who resides in Brooklyn. Her father is a jeweler and her brother a prominent lawyer in Montreal. After crossing the Brooklyn Bridge she asked a man to direct her to her brother's home.

The man offered to escort her. He took her to a house on South Tenth street where he gave her something to drink. After that she remembered nothing until the following day. For several days she said she was kept a prisoner and was brutally treated. At last she escaped and ran to the Clymer street police station and told her story.

Begs Police Protection.

Captain Cruise, to whom Miss de Hunt told her story, said she was hysterical when she appeared at the station house. She exclaimed repeatedly, "Please protect me." "Don't let them beat me." "Don't let them lock me in that closet." She could not tell a coherent story, and the captain, thinking her insane, summoned an ambulance from the Williamsburg hospital.

Dr. Henderson, who responded, told Captain Cruise that the girl must have been horribly treated to be in such a mental and physical condition. After he had brought her to the hospital he found that she was in a more serious state than was at first supposed. As a result he notified the coroner's office that the girl might die and asked that her ante mortem statement be taken.

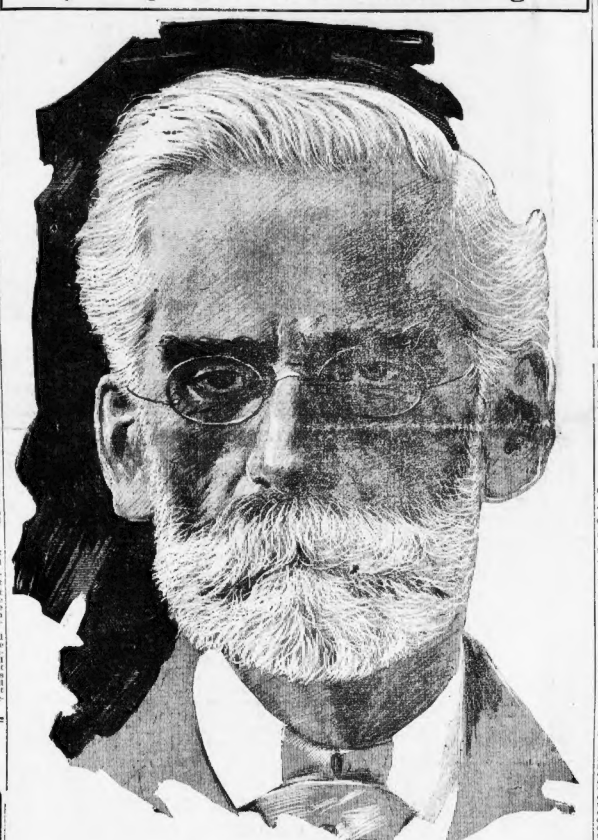
E. Gerry Brown Stirs Wage-Earners By Eloquent Plea for Labor's Rights



E. Gerry Brown in Impassioned Lynn Speech

SCORES DRAPERS' RULE

League Candidate for Lieutenant Governor Urges Union Men to Demand Their Rights.

Tells of Despotic Sway with Which Hopedale's Owners Hold Town in Their Grasp.

The wage-earners of Lynn turned out in full force last night to do honor to the Independence League candidates who visited the city to present the aims of the party for the people before the voters. Thomas L. Hisgen, E. Gerry Brown, Hon. William N. Osgood, Clement L. Pollock and Hon. Walter L. Ranadell were the speakers, and each were greeted with generous rounds of applause.

Mr. Brown made the feature speech of the evening. He spoke as follows:

"Mr. Chairman and my Brothers and Sisters of Lynn—The great problem which confronts the American people to-day is how shall they emancipate themselves from the burdens which afflict them? The American people are in debt, sadly in debt.

"The dividends whenever paid, the interest whenever paid and the principal if it is ever paid, there is but one place from which it can be paid, and that is out of the wealth production of the country.

"It is to be paid from the products of the labor of the farmer in the fields and the workers in the shops and the factories. There is no escape from this conclusion. The labor problem has always been before this country for solution.

"Almost the first problem was that known as the slave question. It was many years agitated before it finally came up for settlement, but nevertheless it was before the American people.

"There seems to be a blanket title upon all the men and women in the United States and the wealth production must flow as it has flowed through rivers, large and small, until the wealth is concentrated from the hands of the many that produced it into the hands of the few.

"Daniel Webster said that the nation wouldn't long exist where the whole tendency was to concentrate the wealth of the many into the hands of the few, and surely the time has come when we can point to the fact that the wealth is concentrating into the hands of the few."

How Times Have Changed.

"How rapidly my friends is this happening. At the beginning of the Civil War about seventy-five per cent. could stand and own themselves and own their business and ask tribute of no man, but to-day seventy-five per cent. bow their knee to the other twenty-five per cent.

"Mr. Schofield is making himself believe that he is going to get all the Democratic votes and he proceeds to criticise me as presuming too much in expecting the labor vote and then he further proceeds to lecture Mr. Draper on running an open shop.

"I commend to Mr. Schofield that little verse in the Scripture about the one who can see the mote in his brother's eye, but cannot see the beam in his own and if he will go down to Ipswich and denounce his own shop and put the labor stamp on his own paper, perhaps then he can tell what a good union man he is.

"Until he can do that I will take my

FIRE IN BROCKTON CAUSES $40,000 DAMAGE TO BLOCK

Three Firemen Overcome by Smoke and Great Excitement Stirred by Flames That Brought Out Entire Department—Stubborn Fight to Check Blaze.

Special to the Boston American.

BROCKTON, Oct. 30.—Forty thousand dollars' worth of property was destroyed, three firemen were overcome, the fire department was given a terrific battle against smoke and flames, and tremendous excitement was created in the heart of the business district by a fire which raged in the upper floors of the Atherton Furniture Company's place on Centre street this forenoon.

The losers are:

Atherton Furniture Company, damage to stock by fire, smoke and water, $35,000.

Knight & Richmond, owners of building, $5,000.

The Atherton Company occupies one-half the brick building at No. 41 Centre street. The other half is occupied by the Kennedy Clothing Company, with a pary-wall between. The bulding is two stories high on the Cetnre street front, rising to four stories on the Church street rear.

SEND IN SECOND ALARM.

Stockman Walter Simpson of the Atherton Company's staff went up to the fourth floor at 8 a. m. to look over his stock as usual. He found the place in flames. When the apparatus responded to the first alarm Fire Chief Harry Marston immediately ordered a second alarm, the blaze being threatening and the locality particularly dangerous. When they went to pull in the second alarm they sounded an "all-out" by mistake. So the second alarm apparatus had to be called by telephone.

The fire worked down through to the third floor. At this point the firemen, by redoubled efforts, managed to hold the flames from passing through to the second floor. The actual fire damage was confined to the Atherton side of the party-wall on the two upper floors. But tons of water, which were thrown into the upper stories through nine different lines of hoses, went down through to the second and ground floors and 11 thousands of dollars worth of additional damage to the stock.

Fight Through Dense Smoke.

The firemen had a hard time on account of dense smoke. Three firemen were overcome and had to be carried out of the building. In the open air they quickly revived.

The fire burned for two hours before the all-out was sounded in earnest.

While the firemen were at work Centre street was thronged with excited spectators and anxious property owners from adjacent buildings. It was greatly feared at first that the Kennedy Clothing Company would suffer and that the fire might even spread toward Main street on the upper side and down to the railroad tracks on the other.

Police Check Big Crowd.

City Marshal Irs Kingman, in charge of the police detail, kept the crowd back in the narrow thoroughfare of Centre street. When the fire was at its height and there was fear that it would spread, many of the proprietors of near by stores thought they ought to take out their goods. But this fear was allayed as it was seen that the fire department was able to cope with the flames.

Knight & Richmond, owners of the building, and the Atherton Furniture Company, are fully protected by insurance. Immediately after the fire the Atherton Furniture Company announced it would open temporary quarters at No. 61 Centre street.

MORAN ILL, VICTIM OF COLD AND OVERWORK

CONFINED TO HIS ROOMS, DISTRICT ATTORNEY SEEKS REST AND QUIET.

District Attorney John B. Moran is ill at his apartments in the Hotel Navarre today, suffering from a severe cold and overwork.

He was unable to visit his office in the Court House at the usual hour, and is remaining in seclusion. He hopes that rest and quiet for a few hours will enable him to shake off the illness.

Mr. Moran has been under a great mental and physical strain ever since he was elected to his present office and has put in more hours there and seen more people there on business connected with the duties of the office during the past two years than any District Attorney Suffolk County ever had.

Rich and poor alike have been able to get his ear at all times and this, and the attention he has given to the details of prosecutions, has been so exhausting that few men would have been able to endure it.

Even while campaigning he has given as much attention to official duties as if when not in the field as a candidate.

MORAN INDORSED BY LABOR UNION

The office of District Attorney for Suffolk County is the most powerful office for good or evil in the Commonwealth. The man entrusted with the enforcement of the law in the district where the laws are made, where the greatest violators of the law, the public service corporations, do business, where the most when a public prosecutor fears to do his duty; they need the protection of the law; the strong can take care of themselves. The greatest protector of a poor man's right is an honest and fearless District Attorney like John B. Moran.

MYSTERY IN DEATH AT THE WALDORF ASTORIA

GUEST BEATEN TO DEATH; NOTE TELLS OF A BRUTAL ATTACK BY THUGS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Deepest mystery surrounds the finding of the body of a man, evidently beaten to death, in his room on the fourteenth floor of the Waldorf Astoria Hotel last night, and to-day the energies of the New York police are being focussed in an attempt to discover how he came by the terrible injuries which killed him.

Found lying on the floor of his room, after the door had been forced, the body of who had been a guest of the hotel since last Thursday, bearing the name of H. B. Potter, Jr., of Philadelphia, gave evidence of fearful treatment at the hands of thugs.

Two deep gashes in the forehead, four in the face and one in the scalp, his nose broken and his feet crushed, as though beaten with cobblestones, bore evidence of a terrible pounding.

In the room was a note, evidently to his wife, showing that Potter realized that he was dying and giving instructions as to the disposition of his property.

Mystery in Secrecy.

Every circumstance surrounding the case is regarded with mystery and the detectives are all at sea as to the motive for the perpetration of the crime and the reason why when the victim knew that he was dying, he summoned no medical assistance, and kept it a condition from the knowledge of the hotel management.

When the coroner arrived at the hotel after midnight he at once announced that it was a case purely for the police and the detectives were immediately put on the case. The coroner then ordered the body removed to the morgue.

The news that a man had been found killed in the hotel spread among the diners and the crowd that had come in from the auto show and caused the greatest excitement.

Potter registered at the hotel Thursday. Saturday night he came into the hotel in a befuddled condition. He had been robbed of his watch and said he had been in a fight and had also lost his jewelry. He had to be assisted to his room.

Seen Alive at 10 O'clock.

The last time the man was seen alive was when a waiter brought breakfast to his room at 10 o'clock this morning, when he said he was not feeling well.

During the course of the day the maid whose business it is to clean the room made several ineffectual efforts to get into the room, and, before going off watch, reported the fact to the office.

Detectives of the house accompanied her to the room and an entrance was effected. The man was found lying face downward in a small hall that leads from the bedroom to the private bath. He was undressed save for the jacket of a pair of pajamas.

Dr. Adams, the house physician, was called and pronounced him dead. The face was battered almost beyond recognition.

On a table in the room was found the remnants of the meal that had been served by the waiter this morning. The clothes of the man were laid out neatly on a chair, folded up, and there was no evidence of a struggle. In the pockets of the coat were found $16.35 in cash and on a table was a letter addressed to Mrs. H. Bradley Potter, Jr., of Norristown, Pa. Over the long distance telephone from Doylestown, it was learned that Mr. Potter was an agent of the Michigan Commercial Insurance Company. Mr. Potter was known to be a man of wealth and was said to be worth between $70,000 and $80,000.

Over the phone, Mrs. Potter, a sister of the man who was killed, said she had been called to the home of her sister-in-law yesterday as Mrs. Potter had become worried over the absence of her husband.

She said that right days ago Mr. Potter had left the house not feeling well, and had gone to Atlantic City. After being there two days she said he had written, saying he was going to New York and would write again. After this she said nothing had been heard from him.

Modern Portia Defending Man Charged with Murder

HARRIETTE JOHNSON WOOD.

For the first time in the legal history of New York State a woman is defending a man charged with murder—Mrs. Harriette Johnson Wood.

The accused is Bedros Hampartjoolu, the agent of the Armenian Haschakists, whose blackmailing plots and whose membership extended into Boston, Worcester and other New England cities.

Hampartjoolu slept and killed Hovannes Tavshanjian, a millionaire rug importer, in New York last July because he would not yield to the blackmailing of the conspirators and advised that others refuse to accede to their demands.

Boston and Worcester Armenians of wealth were also marked for the assassin's hand, and some of them had given up to the terrorists. Hampartjoolu's principals used Boston, Providence and Worcester as their chief localities of operation outside of New York.

Two of the men marked by the conspirators were D. M. Arslan of this city, editor of Armenia, and M. H. Gulesian, a wealthy Boston merchant. Father Leonce Mariosegian, who was one of the leaders of the Armenian movement and was indicted for alleged blackmail and bribery, was ordained in Worcester and often made his headquarters there. Some of the conspirators located frequently in Boston and Providence.

RICH NEW YORK BROKER CRAZED WHILE ABROAD

John V. Rhoades Confined in London Infirmary by Friends, Cable Says.

BRUNSWICK, Me., Oct. 30.—A cable gram received by Mrs. John V. Rhoades formery Miss Alice Ralph, a daughter of the late Julian Ralph, announces that her husband, a son of Dr. Archibald C. Rhoades, U. S. N., retired, is ill with mental trouble in a London (England), infirmary.

Mr. Rhoades started for New York the latter part of last month when the financial crisis was threatened. From there he intended to go to Paris, but for some unknown reason went instead to London. He did not stay there long, however, but took passage upon the Cunarder Campania for New York.

When he reached Queenstown he disembarked, and after sending some $600 worth of cablegrams to his New York brokers, turned back to England where some of his friends, noticing his strange conduct, had him committed to an infirmary.

This seems one of the last chapters in a unique romance. Mr. and Mrs. Rhoades were married in the Fall of 1904 under somewhat unusual circumstances in Camden, N. J., by Magistrate Morris Odell.

It was Mr. Rhoades' second marriage and the present Mrs. Rhoades wanted to have the ceremony performed in New York, but as Rhoades had been divorced from his first wife in that State the law balked this plan. The entire wedding party then went across the river and were wed.

Mr. and Mrs. Rhoades lived in New York a short time and then came to Brunswick, where they have made their home practically all the time since. In New York Mr. Rhoades was a member of the Union League Club and was a well known club man.

SULTAN AT CZAR'S MERCY BY NEW PACT

PARIS, Oct. 30.—Russia has Turkey at its mercy at last, through a startling diplomatic maneuver of which the details have just leaked out.

The Czar obtained his long-sought advantage at the Turkish capital by a secret treaty with Bulgaria. In the event of Turko-Bulgarian troubles Russia pledges itself to aid Bulgaria with a dozen cavalry and artillery regiments, and, in return, Bulgaria promises to lean its new torpedo flotilla to the Czar whenever the latter needs it for service against the Sultan.

The agreement is especially significant in view of the recent Anglo-Russian convention recognizing Russia's predominance on the Western Persian Frontier.

The combination of treaties enables Russia to send an army from Persia to Bulgaria-Bulgarian force, tears down Turkey's defense on its weakest side and makes Constantinople's fall certain in the event of hostilities.

FOXY 'BIG BAT' SHOWS 'EM HOW TO SELL FISH

Crew Angry When He Refused to Bring Vessel In, But Now They See the Point.

The next time the South Boston members of the Bat Whalen's fishing crew think they know more than Bat does they'll take time to consider their judgments.

Only, if Bat hadn't called a neat turn on the T Wharf market bids soon would be reached $75 check-book, and the Atlantic avenue water-front instead of $100 ones.

Early yesterday morning Big Bat—his name is Bartholomew, but he is called "Bat" for brevity and "Big" for size, bought his schooner, Isabella Catherine Ellen, casing in from the fishing grounds with the rest of the fleet. The Catherine and Ellen, named for two of Bat's favorite nieces, is by far the best craft under sail and would have had no trouble about making T Wharf yesterday. The crew figured on last night's seizure.

But, as the Catherine and Ellen rolled up toward Boston Light Bat cast a sure eye to inward and gave orders to anchor.

Crew Made Angry Protest.

There was an awful howl from the crew. But Bat's howl was entirely neutral for Bat's crew obeys with the readiness in proportion to the size of Bat's two fists width took like canvassed hams for hard when they are doubled up. So the Catherine and Ellen laid off the light all yesterday while the other schooners scooted by to port and Bat's crew cursed fluently under its breath at the "Old Man" for a seafaring lunatic.

The other schooners, which made the T wharf market yesterday, sold their fares for $3.50 to $5 a hundredweight. Last night the Catherine and Ellen came leisurely up the harbor, and into her berth and was ready for business to-day with her 75,000 pounds of cod and haddock.

When the buyers swarmed to the wharf to-day they reconsidered their opposition during the troubles of the Knickerbocker Trust Company in New York. For the storm had made poor fishing, yesterday's fares were few and fish were scarce to-day with Friday's big demands looming up.

Prices Go "Kiting."

Bat looked complacently around the smelly wharf. Besides the Catherine and Ellen there were only or ten other schooners in. And they all had very small fares, not more than 5,000 or 6,000 pounds apiece. Their total didn't come up to the 75,000 which Bat had in the Catherine and Ellen.

Buying was fierce. Selling was lovely. Yesterday's prices of $3.50 to $5 a hundred went ballooning up to $6 to $7 a hundred, as the commission men hustled for fish. Bat averaged about $6 a hundred for his fare.

When the tale was told the Catherine and Ellen had had twenty-five dollars extra on account of Bat's waiting over for to-day's market.

Now Bat's crew will sail the Catherine and Ellen up to T Wharf backwards if Bat says the word.

She has been much with John Mansfield, another agent of the National Casualty Insurance Company, who came here with Bowen, and a double elopement is hinted.

Only One of Many Letters Received by Sheriff Seavey

FROM FORMER PRISONERS

Oct. 18, 1907.

Dear Sheriff Seavey:

I suppose you have been wondering all this time why I did not write and let you know what I was doing and how I was getting along. I confess I am ungrateful. I had forgotten you, my benefactor, for quite a while and not until I saw your name in the paper that you were running for office did I pluck up sufficient courage to write you. I did not think you had to be elected to the office. I thought it was an appointment like the judges of Massachusetts. If the people of the Bay State believe in a good man you need not fear of election.

There was no more unfortunate creature in this world than myself at one time. You know it well. But you met me. The world was against me if it ever was against any man. The law is so universal that it seldom gets close to the individual case, and its iron hand falls sometimes unjustly. It did so in my case. I was convicted of a crime I never committed. Perjured witnesses appeared against me. Despite my appeals I was sent to jail.

The sorrow caused by this miscarriage of justice was somewhat compensated for by the kindness with which you and your officers at Charles Street Jail treated me. I was a prisoner, to be sure, but they never forgot I was a man. Their courtesies were consistent with their conduct.

When my term was about to expire you know how my wife died from what the doctors called consumption, but which really was a broken heart. My children were then left to the cold charity of this world. Mercy was not meant for me. The depths of despondency into which I drifted can never be described.

But let me close this letter with letting the world know that you it was who sent me as best you could on my way rejoicing. You gave me clothes and you gave me money enough to go to another part of this great country where I could live life anew. You gave me sufficient means to get my little children together, and here in the great West they are with me and offer up their prayers for your success.

God bless you, Sheriff Seavey.

If you publish this please withhold my name for the sake of my children. Yours gratefully.

FARMERS IN REVOLT OVER TRUST TYRANNY

PRODUCERS IN OPEN BATTLE AGAINST EXTORTION BY NEW CONTRACTS.

In revolt against contracts which made them Milk Trust slaves, with plenty of money at their command and determined to win, no matter what sacrifices they have to make, the milk producers of Central Massachusetts to-day begin their fight against the Boston Milk Trust, which for several years has had a rein around the necks of the farmers.

A committee of eleven, appointed at a meeting of the farmers in Horticultural Hall, Worcester, yesterday, is arranging plans for the fight against the contractions and on November 1 the producers will refuse to sign any more contracts with the contractors.

Farmers at Mercy of Trust.

The contracts which the milk combination of Boston have tried to force upon the farmers, and which caused the great revolt, exposed to-day for the first time by the BOSTON AMERICAN, place the producers of Boston's milk in the absolute grip of the Milk Trust, and just as the consumers are at the mercy of the combination.

The Worcester county farmers are fighting these contracts and have refused to sign them. Their struggle is being watched with keen interest by the other producers, and by all Boston consumers, because upon their success or failure depends a square deal for both producer and consumer.

The contractors require the producers to ship milk "on their cars"; to stand the losses of surplus or shortage; to submit to a change in price if the contractors so will, and in fact to place their whole business in the hands of the combination. The contracts bear the threat that unless they are signed by to-morrow (Thursday) one cent a can will be deducted from the price offered.

OBJECT TO PRICE OFFERED.

To begin with, the producers object to the prices quoted by the contractors, saying that they do not afford them a living profit for the product of their dairies and that the public is overcharged also, as the combination makes an undue profit.

But, even if the prices offered by the contractors were satisfactory, the farmers declare the terms of the contract are not.

By the strict application of the rules for shortage and surplus the farmer is held in heavy chains. But if his supply is not up to his rating, and he therefore suffers a reduction in price as a penalty, he is forbidden to add to it by purchasing milk elsewhere and making up his quota. Thus the farmers cannot interchange, and the combination gets all the benefits of the natural milk uneven production.

The farmers call attention to the requirement that shipments be made "on their (the contractors') own cars." They say this proves that the railroads have turned their refrigerator cars over to the contractors, thus blocking independent competition.

The rating scheme, however, is the principal grievance. The producer is given a rating on the probable daily capacity of his dairy. Nearly all the farmers produce less than twenty cans a day. The way the rating table works out may be demonstrated in the case of a farmer with a normal producing capacity of ten cans a day—eighty-five quarts.

This farmer gets a rating of 10. For the month of October he is allowed thirty-five cents a can for his milk in case he does not supply less than the ten cans daily, nor have an excess of more than forty-five cans a month—or about one and one half cans a day excess.

All Benefits to Trust.

In case the contractors experience a shortage, that is, if the Boston public consumes more milk than the contractors can get, the contractor agrees to pay the thirty-five cents a can for all the excess. But, in such a case, if the producers' supply runs under the ten cans a day, he is paid a smaller price for his milk. For instance, if he can only send in 45 cans a day he only gets thirty-two cents a can for his whole supply.

But if the contractors have a surplus—that is, if Boston does not use all the milk sent in, the farmer only gets his 35 cents a can when he sends in not more than ten cans a day (with the 45 cans a month margin). If he sends in one more than this, he loses on his whole consignment. For instance, if he sends in about 15½ cans a day he only gets 32 cents a can for the whole supply.

These rules are established so as to keep the farmers as near their rating as possible, so that the contractors will know just how much milk they are to receive and can therefore keep an iron hand on the market. The expense of keeping the supply just up to the mark—and not over—is, however, thrown upon the shoulders of the farmer. The contractor cannot tell when there is to be a surplus or shortage, nor can he control the output of his farms. In fact, dumping or surpluses in Boston can be largely controlled by the contractors in any event. The farmer can be relied on to bear the burden, because it is so written in his contract.

One section of the contract reads:

"If the conditions of the production or sale of milk shall necessitate a change of price in the six months and the parties of the first part (the contractors) and the directors of the B. C. M. P. Company recommend a change, such change shall take place without invalidating this contract."

It is not explained in the contract who the "B. C. M. P. Company" is, but it is presumed to be the Boston Co-Operative Milk Producers' Company. This organization evidently gives a vote on the question a representative of the producers, retained by the producers practically to be controlled by the contractors now.

Bound by Iron Contract.

The effect, therefore, of this clause is that the contractor has the sole privilege of making the producer send his milk in for six months at the price named in the contract. But if the contractor chooses to pay less he may do so. In other words, the farmer cannot exact more, regardless of what conditions arise, but the contractor can pay less. The producer is bound by the contract, the contractor is not.

The producer must not ship his milk elsewhere, because he has no cans, and if he ships his surplus to any other place it is the contractors' cans he can be fined or imprisoned.

The contractors also reserve to themselves the right to determine whether the milk is satisfactory or not, and there is nothing in the contract to prevent them from shipping back milk accepted through a fault of the shipper. The contractor can thus send back all the milk he does not market and make the farmer stand the loss.

VINCENT GIRLS IN CUPID'S REALM

On the left is Lelia Burnett, whose engagement is announced. Helen Sears, her cousin, on the right, is said to be sought in marriage by a foreigner, and that her betrothal will soon be made known.

HUB BELLE'S ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED

Society Surprised to Hear that Lelia Burnett Is to Marry Prominent N. Y. Club Man.

Boston society was more than surprised yesterday when Mrs. Robert Burnett of Southboro announced the engagement of her pretty blonde daughter, Lelia, the belle of the bud set two seasons ago, and a prominent Vincent Club girl, to Mr. Delano, a wealthy New York club man.

It was thought all along that the wife some young heiress favored a certain Boston youth who had been her most constant and persistent suitor since the days of that brilliant Somerset ball at which she made her initial bow to the smart world of fashion, but it is whispered that since Miss Burnett's wedding to Francis Cunningham Bishop in New York, at which Miss Burnett was the most admired of the interesting group of bridesmaids, and at which she is said to have met her fiance, that she has been rather indifferent to her train of Boston admirers.

Chum of Helen Sears.

Miss Burnett spent Winter before last traveling abroad with her mother, and was for much of the time with her aunt, Mrs. J. Montgomery Sears, and her cousin, Miss Helen Sears, who returns in November to make her debut. The two young girls are the best of chums and are constantly together. There is also a persistent rumor afloat to the effect that shortly after Miss Sears is introduced her engagement, too, will be announced, but, unlike her handsome cousin, it is said that she is to wed a foreigner when she met during her long residence abroad.

Boston's Wealthiest Bud.

Miss Sears is Boston's wealthiest bud this season, and will be presented at the most brilliant ball of the Winter, which will be followed closely by a round of teas, dinners, receptions and such.

Miss Sears was the only attendant at the marriage of her cousin, Miss Katherine Gardner, a niece of Mrs. Jack Gardner, to the Rev. Francis B. Hoyer, in June, after which she and her mother sailed for Europe.

Miss Burnett served in the same capacity shortly before at the wedding in Southboro of her cousin, Elinor Burnett, when she married the Rev. Ellis Bishop.

MORSE PLEDGES COSTLY HOME

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Notwithstanding the statement attributed to Charles W. Morse, the deposed steamship king that he is still worth $11,000,000 on paper, the financier has mortgaged his magnificent home, No. 278 Fifth avenue, for $350,000. The mortgage was made in favor of E. J. Berwind of the Coal Company, at No. 1 Bowling Green.

SAY HE MADE $300,000 IN BIG SWINDLE

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Charged with being the chief director of a gigantic swindle, James E. Lytle, of the Hotel Knickerbocker, with business offices at No. 27 Pine street, has been held in $15,000 bail for examination in the Centre Street Court.

It is alleged that the swindling practices of Lytle ruined Nelson W. Clark, prominent in society, church and business circles in Minneapolis, and caused him to end his life by jumping from a bridge into the Rocky River, near his home.

Inspector McCaffery received telegrams from Minneapolis and other cities in the West stating that Lytle was wanted on serious criminal charges. It is said his victims in Minneapolis alone have lost more than $200,000.

A score of detectives are hunting for the confederates of Lytle, who are believed to be in this city.

The specific complaint against Lytle is by S. S. Smart, who alleges that in 1902 Lytle induced him by false statements to buy 500 shares of the Automatic Needle Company for $2,000. Lytle is alleged to have represented that the company has sold goods valued at $500,000 and had orders for $300,000 more. Lytle is alleged to have represented that Landenburg, Thalman & Co. had agreed to take the stock at 99 a share. Mr. Smart, as a favor, was let in on the ground floor.

Dr. Carter Sawyer, of Foxboro, Mass., who bought 400 shares of the Automatic stock, upon representation said to be similar to those made to Mr. Smart.

GROSSCUP TO FACE CHARGE OF MANSLAUGHTER

CHICAGO, Oct. 30.—Sheriff E. H. Glover of Coles county will to-day formally arrest Judge Peter S. Grosscup, senior judge of the United States Court of Appeals, on a charge of manslaughter. He will be one and five other Chicagoans, officers and directors of the Charleston-Mattoon Interurban Railway, were indicted at Charleston.

Judge Grosscup will be taken into custody, but will furnish $5,000 bonds for his appearance in Charleston on November 14.

At a meeting of the Chicagoans indicated it was agreed to surrender to Sheriff Glover to-day, furnish bonds and prepare to fight the case at once. The indictments are the result of an accident on an electric line near Charleston last August when eighteen persons were killed and fifty seriously injured.

RUNAWAY PAIR IN COURT FACE IRATE FATHER

Refusal to Consent to Annulment; Charge Groom With Abduction.

QUINCY, Oct. 30.—Sitting in the Quincy District Court to-day with their arms around one another, Giuseppi Giuliani and Caterina Ardesino faced Judge Albert E. Avery as the result of their elopement from Quincy to Mansfield yesterday when they were married by the Rev. Father J. M. Coffey at St. Mary's Parochial residence. After the marriage they were arrested by Inspector Daniel McKay on complaint of the girl's father, who had pursued them and brought back here. The hearing was postponed until next Monday.

Giuliani is charged with abduction, Caterina being the seventeen years of age. The girl is charged by her parents with being a minor child. Attorney Frank Terrell appeared for the parents of the girl and Attorney C. Hardwick for the bride. Arraignment was waived and the bail of $100 each, which the couple secured last night on being taken out of cells, was continued.

After the court had postponed the case the parents of the girl called long with their daughter and with the young man to induce them to consent to the annulment of the marriage but neither would yield. Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Ardesino believe that they will not prosecute the case farther.

The young husband of the girl has a good position as a shoemaker in Mansfield. He has worked in this city about a year.

PROBE EVIL TO THE ROOT, CRY GERMANS

Storm Following Von Moltke Scandal Spreads Over the Empire.

BERLIN, Oct. 30.—Germany is not satisfied with the ruin of Count von Moltke and the disgrace of his fellow "Knights of the Round Table," whose names figured in the testimony at the Von Moltke-Harden libel trial.

The court's decision that Harden was justified in his charges against Von Moltke and his associates was a good beginning, the Berlin press declares, but the campaign should not be allowed to stop now.

Many men guilty of as shocking acts as the attributed to Von Moltke still hold high positions about the Kaiser an wield vast influence in public affairs, says the Tageblatt, voicing the popular outcry. These must be exposed, it is declared, and expelled from the court in disgrace.

Officialism is convinced complete in vestigation will be ordered by the Kaiser and the general opinion is that scandals still more startling than those in which the "Knights" are involved are likely at any time.

ELEVATOR CAGE DRAGS WOMAN BY THE HAIR

BADLY BRUISED, AND WITH SCALP TORN, SHE IS IN SERIOUS CONDITION.

Mrs. Annie McColligan, aged thirty-eight years, of Charlestown, while at work early to-day in the Converse building at No. 101 Milk street, was caught from the floor by an elevator, her hair becoming entangled in the cage.

Mrs. McColligan was dragged from the floor, her hair tightly secured in the under part of the elevator cage. Her struggles and cries were heard, but it was some time before her suspended body was found.

Then, as soon as possible the unfortunate woman was cut down from her terrible position, and she was rushed to the Relief Hospital in an unconscious condition.

The surgeons pronounced her condition serious and she was placed on the dangerous list suffering from severe scalp wounds and multiple bruises of the body.

It is not known how the accident to the woman occurred, but it is thought that Mrs. McColligan, while cleaning the floor, fell too near to the elevator shaft and that the cage in passing up caught her on the hair and hauled her from the floor.

LATEST STYLES ARE BIRDSKINS

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 30.—Dr. George B. Gordon, of the University of Pennsylvania, has reached this city after penetrating the Alaskan wilderness for 2,000 miles on the Mrs. C. C. Harrison expedition, and reports the discovery of a small tribe of aborigines hitherto unknown to ethnologists.

Dr. Gordon calls these unknown Americ can inhabitants "Naskwagamutes." He brought here a collection of their clothing arms and utensils.

The tribe name, Dr. Gordon says, of Athabascan stock, but have been conquered by the Eskimos.

They retain many of the ancient characteristics in speech and dress. Instead of wearing furs like the Eskimos, they make the skins of lions and other great birds into robes for clothing.

15,000 REPORTED DEAD BY EARTHQUAKE IN ASIA

CITY OF BOKHARA SAID TO HAVE BEEN DESTROYED OCT. 21—ONLY 2 SURVIVORS.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—The city of Bokhara in Central Asia is reported destroyed by earthquake on October 21 and 15,000 people are buried in the ruins. The Governor and his mother are said to be the only survivors.

TASHKEND, Russia, Oct. 30.—A landslide has swept the whole town of Karatagh, in Bokhara, burying the entire population of 15,000. The Governor and his mother are believed to be the only survivors.

The above dispatches evidently refer to the same news, although coming from different sources. If an earthquake, the Washington dispatch of October 21 is recalled which referred to heavy vibrations on the siesmograph on that date indicating an earthquake of unusual severity.

A later report from Tashkend says the landslide followed the recent earthquake and that so far as known only two persons were killed at that time. Most of the people, it is said, fled to the open country, but afterward returned to their homes. Still another dispatch says that Karatagh is in a mountainous country and the earth shocks are believed to have so loosened the rock and earth that practically an entire mountainside toppled upon the city.

WESTON, CONFIDENT, RESUMES LONG TRAMP

KENNEBUNK, Me., Oct. 30.—At 5:30 this morning Edward Payson Weston resumed his 1,200-mile walk to Chicago in an attempt to break his record of twenty-six days between Portland and that city which he made forty years ago. He is more than ever confident of success. His schedule for the day includes his arrival at North Berwick at 8:15, South Berwick at 10, Eliot at noon, Portsmouth at 2:15, Hampton, N. H., at 6 p. m., Seabrook at 7 and Newburyport at 8:30. He will spend the night at Newburyport.

Feeling like a man of thirty years, the sixty-nine-year-old pedestrian started from Portland on scheduled time in the face of a blinding northeast rainstorm. The streets of Portland were crowded by eager thousands, who accompanied him a short distance, hampering his progress to such an extent that he arrived at Kennebunk twenty-five minutes behind his schedule. At the start he was accompanied by Deputy Sheriff Joseph C. Sterling, aged 70 years, who did similar escort duty forty years ago when Weston established the wonderful record which has stood ever since. A two-horse wagon containing baggage and driven by C. McElhinney, the manager of Weston, followed. Dr. Melville Chandler, who will look after Weston's physical condition, and two newspaper men were also in the party.

25 Miles in Mud.

When Weston stopped for the night he had covered twenty-five miles in mud and rain. He said: "The weather was stormy but I am prepared for that. The kind words of encouragement I have received from the public have taken off many of my years and I feel better than I did in 1867. My first fifty miles convinced me that I can beat my former record."

Weston's start from Portland was attended by scenes of great enthusiasm. At least 5,000 people were massed about the starting point when Mayor Clifford of Portland wished the aged walker Godspeed. The crowd was so great that street cars were blocked and the efforts of Chief of Police Waterhouse and twenty policemen were unavailing to keep the road clear. Just before the start Weston received a number of telegrams wishing him luck. Of these there were messages from Marshall P. Wilder, the humorist; Mary C. Smith of Providence, whom Weston met in Europe a number of years ago, and Michael J. Donovan, the short-distance professional walker of Boston, who promised to meet Weston when he arrives there and walk into the city with him. Weston wore his old walking shoes as he started from Portland. As he reached the steps of the postoffice he gave a brief talk in reply to demands for a speech, advising his hearers to abstain from alcoholic drinks and beware of mean actions.

Takes Oath Not to Ride.

Then he took an oath before Mayor Clifford not to ride in any vehicle any secular day during the walk to Chicago and not to ride toward his destination on Sunday. The members of the party, at his request, took oath to truthfully report the tramp. Outside Portland, all the way to Kennebunk, he found the roads in bad condition. This morning in starting from Kennebunk he found them but little improved. Last night's rain had left them muddy and heavy. As he started to-day, however, he had the same confidence that has marked all his plans for the walk. Refreshed by a good rest, he said he felt as young as when he took the first walk to Chicago, and in the best of physical condition. All along the route crowds have been walking at the different towns to greet Weston. From the Berwicks he was greeted by hundreds of people who wished him luck. To-day's walk is to cover fifty-six miles. Weston is due in Boston to-morrow.

MORAN AND TEDDY ROOSEVELT, JR.

One of Mr. Moran's opponents thinks that there is a difference in the way American citizens ought to be treated by officers of the law, not all being entitled to be treated alike.

Mr. Moran does not agree to that proposition, and when criticised for summoning the President's son before the grand jury made this reply:

"A companion of President Roosevelt's son on Boston Common, in the presence of young Roosevelt, broke the nose of a police officer. Young Roosevelt and his friend ran away. Young Roosevelt was caught and taken to the lower court. The court refused to issue a warrant for him. The judge questioned him as to who his friend was who had the trouble with the officer. He refused to give his name, and he was allowed by the judge to go. Police officers for several days visited Harvard College for the purpose of finding Roosevelt's friend, not knowing his name, but having a general description of him. They were unable to find him. These facts came to my attention.

"I immediately summoned young Roosevelt to appear before the Grand Jury, where he could be compelled to disclose the name of his friend who assaulted the officer. Immediately upon being summoned to the Grand Jury young Roosevelt's friend surrendered himself to the police department of the city of Boston, and was tried and found not guilty because of the fact that the officer, being in citizens' clothes, did not disclose his official position.

"After young Roosevelt's friend surrendered himself to the officers the Grand Jury postponed action on the case, and finally found a no bill. This was not persecution; this was merely compelling a citizen to do what the law requires him to do, disclose his knowledge of crime.

"As an illustration of how a person acting as Roosevelt did is treated when he belongs to a different social class, I cite the instance of a young boy of Irish parenage, who, in the Police Court of Cambridge, was recently sentenced to thirty days' imprisonment for refusing to do exactly what young Roosevelt refused to do."

'VAUDEVILLE WAR TO OPEN HERE MONDAY'

Next Monday sees the real opening of the "advanced vaudeville" war, as Klaw and Erlanger term it, here in Boston.

The Tremont Theatre is to be the scene of the opening performance and a mighty big three-sheet advertisements are announcing the fact.

A. L. Erlanger was in Boston last night and declares that "the real battle has not been done was only the prelude. Things are on in earnest now."

Mr. Erlanger said, at the Tremont last evening:

"Boston's vaudeville festival starts at the Tremont Theatre next Monday. The 'Keith policy' starts in here at that time on its mission of compressing into nothingness the old and slipshod order of things and of making a smooth pathway for this festival of stars of all the nations.

Something New in Vaudeville.

"Gratified beyond expression by the tremendous success at the Chicago Auditorium, of twice-daily performances each week are witnessing programmes similar to those to be presented here, a similar policy will be put into operation here.

"Briefly and to the point, this means that the Tremont's patrons are to have an array of artists and a class of composite entertainment such as has never before offered the public under the title of vaudeville, and it is to be a popular price.

The Opening Bill.

"The inaugural bill of the festival in Boston is headed by Miss Hetty King, the male impersonator from England, who has captured New York; Paul Cinquevalli, acknowledged to be the world's greatest juggler; Edmund Besanquer, the rival of Saltasate and Kubelik as a violin virtuoso; That Quartette; Simon and Gardner, in "The New Coachman"; the La Vailles, aerial performers; Caldwell and Hardie, singers and dancers; the Brothers Gauthschmidt, European comedy acrobats, with their wonderful acrobatic dogs; and the realistic moving pictures of the Lusitania coming into New York harbor."

SPURNS SMART SET; GIRL WIFE ASKS DIVORCE

BROCKTON, Oct. 30.—Because she says her ideas and manner did not suit the rich relatives of her youthful husband, and she did not care to be cut off altogether from her home relations, Mrs. Maud Crowell Foote of Brockton, who was married when barely sixteen, is now awaiting decision by Judge DeCourcy in her divorce action brought against Henry S. Foote of Denver.

Back of the divorce action is a remarkable youthful romance. At the time of her marriage to Mr. Foote, who is a son of a former California Senator, Mrs. Foote, who was Maude Crowell of Brockton, was a pupil at the Howard grammar school here. She met Mr. Foote, while visiting in New York city, in 1904, and they were married shortly afterward.

Husband a Millionaire.

The divorce case was tried before Judge DeCourcy in Boston and attracted attention because of the youth and beauty of the applicant. Her husband was reputed to be a millionaire.

"I was happy for a short time after my marriage," Mrs. Foote says. "My husband, Henry S. Foote, son of Denver, is the son of W. W. Foote of California, at one time United States Senator from that State. He is a grandson of ex-Governor Henry S. Foote of Nevada and a nephew of F. C. Benedict, a rich New York banker. His rich relatives were not satisfied with me after I was introduced to them as his wife and wanted to send me away to a boarding school that I might be trained to mingle in smart society and talk in a way to suit them.

Rebelled and Ran Away.

"I bore it as long as I could, but refused to go to school. Then I rebelled and ran away. After leaving them I went to the home of my aunt in New York. We traveled for a long time, going to Alaska among other places, after which I returned to my home in Brockton. I have lived there since. I suppose my ideas and my manner did not suit them.

"I did not propose to be cut off altogether from my relatives, my home and my friends just for the privilege of being admitted to smart society, of the sort that does not compare favorably with the kind I have always known.

BRITON SPEAKS FOR HARVARD; KAISER ANNOYED

Surprised That Prof. Schofield Should Represent University at Berlin.

HADLEY'S ANNUAL SPEECH

BERLIN, Oct. 30.—The Kaiser and faculty are much annoyed by the action of Harvard College in sending Professor William Henry Schofield, Canadian born and a loyal subject of King Edward, to lecture at the University of Berlin as a representative of an American university.

Professor Schofield is yet to be heard on "A Comparison of English and Other Literatures." The Kaiser had to gulp hard to swallow Professor Schofield. So did the members of the American colony in Berlin, but they did it with a poor grace and Harvard is likely to hear from time to time some very bitter criticisms of its queer Student.

Professor Schofield is very popular personally but that a Canadian and a graduate of Toronto University should have been selected for a mission on which there was every reason for choosing a thorough and through American impresses all intellectual Berlin as very queer.

The situation was not improved when British Ambassador Lascelles remarked patronizingly to United States Ambassador Tower:

"I see your countrymen have sent over a Briton to represent you as this year's 'exchange professor' in the German-American educational rapprochement."

Only Professor Schofield's delicacy in not flaunting his nationality has saved Americans in Berlin from a great of embarrassment.

The Kaiser and his consort, the American Ambassador, many representatives of German officialdom and a general turnout of Teutonic scientists and men of letters to-day heard the annual botanical address of President Hadley of Yale, who spoke on the German-American intellectual reciprocity plan.

CLOSE 'CORNER CHURCH' DOOR TO ELOPERS

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—The Little Church Around the Corner, famous as the scene of many runaway marriages and weddings of theatrical folk, is no longer to serve as a Gretna Green. This is the decision of its noted rector, the Rev. Dr. George C. Houghton, who says:

"I want to get rid of the idea that this is a good place to come to and get secretly married. Hereafter, whenever possible, the banns shall be published in the church. Publication of the bans works for the best interest of everybody except the divorce lawyer. I shall refuse to marry Catholics, as I believe they should seek a clergyman of their own church."

NEW ENGLAND SHIVERS FROM ARCTIC BLAST

Boston and New England is shivering in a chilling cold that is scheduled to keep up over night and into to-morrow. The forecast is:

"Continued cold to-night and Thursday. Rising temperature, with tendency to warm after to-morrow."

The Boston temperature was 39 degrees above zero at 10 a. m. to-day, with prospects that the mercury run might send the mercury up to 40 degrees above by 2 p. m.

The coldest place in New England to-day is Greenville, Me., at 24 above. The warmest place is Nantucket, 40 above.

MILL SHUTS DOWN.

LINCOLN, Me., Oct. 30.—The Katahdin Box and Paper Company's mill was shut down by order of Superintendent N. H. Jones, and 150 employes were thrown out of work.

EX-GOV. DOUGLAS IS HOST TO DIRECTORS

Ex-Governor William L. Douglas tendered a dinner at the New Algonquin Club to the board of directors and others in the organization of the W. L. Douglas Shoe Company of Brockton. Mr. Douglas has just returned from a 6,000-mile trip studying the conditions of trade in the United States. In behalf of the directors and others, Mr. Douglas presented D. W. Pack, the general manager of the W. L. Douglas retail stores, a gold watch.

BARBERS FEAR BOYCOTT.

QUINCY, Oct. 30.—The barbers of Quincy, Weymouth, Hingham, Braintree, Randolph and Holbrook are threatened with a boycott because they are to add another day to their week, from ten to fifteen cents in accordance with a vote of Local 399 of the Barbers' Union.

GET BOARDING COMFORT THROUGH AMERICAN ADS.

WATER finds its level; so does humanity. That great mass of people whom necessity or expediency compels to live in Boarding Houses soon sorts itself into congenial classes.

If fate decrees that you must board, why not do so under agreeable conditions. It is just as easy to board in a refined household, or even with a private family, as it is to board elsewhere.

All the better class of boarding houses are advertised in the AMERICAN, and if you would avoid many weary pilgrimages, and find a homelike boarding place at once, you will make a careful study of AMERICAN BOARD AND ROOM ADS.

FOOD FAIR FREE IF YOU WEIGH 200

"And I goes to the Food Fair on Fat Folks' Day and I wez to the ticket-taker, wez I—'Lemme in, I'm fat.'

"And he wez, wezee—'Nix, too thin.'"

(Diary of a Living Skeleton.)

There are more gay parties at the Food Fair in Mechanics Hall to-day than there have been since the Fair opened.

For it's Fat Folks' Day, and some of the individuals admitted free on account of their avoirdupois are the largest parties that ever set back a pair of scales.

To-day every man, woman and child—if over there is such a child, is admitted free to the Fair if he or she weighs over 200 pounds and not over a ton. The management, with sagacity little short of prematural, puts the maximum limit at 2,000 pounds on account of the building laws.

Only the Real Goods Goes.

If you are fat, go to the Fair to-day free. They will open the gates wide for you, take them down if necessary.

It is expected that most all the fat men will go to the Fair, for your real fat man is not ashamed of it. Women are different, of course. Some are coy about admitting weigh 199, when they would break the ambition of a 200-pound suitor.

You've got to be genuinely fat and heavy to get by free. They will weigh you at the door. If you dip the 200-pound mark, you go free. But you must not carry the weight, no lead pipe in your pockets or buckshot in your boots, or your real goods goes.

The rules for Fat Folks' Day provide that all applicants for admission present themselves at the Food Fair Hall entrance, where the floor and timbers are extra strong.

Some Rules for the Fat Ones.

Any metal, lead or other junk found on fat candidates will be confiscated and sold for the benefit of the Home for Aged and Discouraged Fat People.

Twins cannot be counted as one for weight.

Not more than two fat people allowed to walk abreast in the aisles.

Fat folks are forbidden from jumping, romping or trying to act as cut-ups.

Any fat person losing weight at the Fair is referred to the "Lost and Found" office.

In case of a panic the fat folks will please go through the floor first and not hold back and fall on the thins.

Fat folks are cautioned to keep away from the pork and sausage exhibits as the temptation may be too much for the machinery.

SAYS BIRDS SAVE MILLIONS

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Because of the decrease in birds, the United States is losing yearly without protest a sum larger than the capitalization of all the national banks in the country, was the statement made by President William Dutcher of the National Association of Audubon Societies, in the annual meeting of the association.

The public, declared Mr. Dutcher, allows agricultural crops valued at $500,000,000 to be annually destroyed by insects, which destruction is entirely due to the rapid decrease in the number of insectivorous birds.

"If a million or more dollars are lost through the management of a bank or other fiduciary institution," he said, "it creates a wave of protest throughout the entire country, yet a yearly loss equal to the entire capitalization of the national banks of the country creates no commotion whatever, simply because the public does not realize what is going on."

CHICAGO UNIVERSITY MEN VACCINATED

CHICAGO, Oct. 30.—All the students at the University of Chicago have been rallied in the four divisional meetings and informed that they would have to be vaccinated before they could get out unless they were able to present certificates of successful vaccination within the last five years.

Four cases of smallpox having been discovered in the university within a week, the faculty and city health department considered that the situation warranted heroic measures.

ALL ARE INVITED

BIG DEMANDS FOR AUTOS AT PALACE SHOW

Agents and Customers Busy with Their Machines for Next Season.

BY J. C. KERRISON.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—To-day the Independents' motor show saw what might be termed increased activity on the part of the exhibitors and visitors alike. The former were anxious to close up with prospective agencies while the latter were just as eager to bring matters to a conclusion so that they would know just where they were at. With both sides anxious to "close" there was as a rule little difficulty in reaching a satisfactory conclusion, and it is safe to say that as far as actual business is concerned this will be the banner day.

It is a noticeable fact that many who have been constant visitors are now getting a little nervous, and whereas in the early portion of the show they were just lukewarm as regards certain cars they are now really anxious to place their individual order.

That there will be a shortage and especially late deliveries in the more popular lines of cars is a certainty. Many of the leading makers have virtually shipped off their season's output and at the close of the show will return to their plants to hasten deliveries.

In its efforts to individualize the attendance of the eighth annual automobile show, now in progress at the Palace, the Automobile Club of America will open a novel expedient of setting each night aside for the entertainment of certain groups or classes of men. This idea has been carried out to the letter as well as the spirit. Prominent merchants saw the show by invitation last Friday evening. On Saturday the entire corps of city officials were asked to appear as guests and many accepted. Engineers held the place of honor Monday night, while last evening was devoted to society.

This Will Be Military Night.

Military night this evening will mark the close of these special events. A large number of officers in the United States army and navy stationed in New York and vicinity have accepted the club's invitation. To-morrow brings the show to a close, and it will pass into motor history as the most brilliant and successful exhibition which the Automobile Club of America has fostered for the furtherance of the industry.

During the past eighteen months extensive tests have been carried on by the New York School of Automobile Engineers on the use of denatured alcohol as a fuel for internal combustion engines, and many previously held theories have been exploded. One of the most interesting points that has been developed is the possibility of starting a cold engine on alcohol with a standard carburetter. It was to show this that the school installed a six-cylinder motor, a part of its exhibit at the show, but its operation was prevented by the fire department, which would not permit the use of a fuel of any kind in an exhibition building.

Attractive Atlas Car.

A car which has attracted no end of attentions since the opening of the show is the two-cycle Atlas, handled in Boston by the Harry Fredrick Company, and which company has been represented at the show by President Alfred Robbins and Secretary Lincoln Robbins.

The Atlas Company is the only concern exhibiting at the show which makes a specialty of turning out both pleasure and commercial vehicles of the two-cycle type. The former was confined to a two-cylinder runabout the present year, but for the coming season there will be listed a three-cylinder double folding seat touring, folding two or four passengers, and in a four-cylinder model in the same style of a passenger touring car, the powers being 25, 36 and 40 horse power respectively.

The two new models make their debut at the show and their specifications are of interest. The cylinder dimensions are 4½ by 4½ inches. Thermo-siphon cooling is used and high tension ignition from 30 cells. The clutch is of the conical type, with a three-speed selective change-speed gear. Hess-Bright ball bearings being used in the gear box and Timken roller bearings in the wheels. The latter are 34 by 31-2 in the case of the smaller car and 34 by 4 inches on the larger. Three quarter elliptic springs are used on the former and semi-elliptic on the latter.

New Austin Roadster.

As in former years, the Austin as revealed at the show will be distinguished by the high order of the various models staged. The Austin Automobile Company, Grand Rapids, Mich., will this year turnout a new six-cylinder roadster with combination body, permitting its use either as a runabout or as a touring car. They also show a four-cylinder sixty-horsepower limousine with detachable top, and a ninety-horsepower, six-cylinder touring car.

These cars are distinguished by numerous exclusive features of design and construction that have been evolved by their builders, and having proved unusually successful during the several years that this line has been on the market, have been perpetuated from season to season in improved and modified form, so that they may well be said to now represent an Austin standard of construction, which has been reached by successive stages of improvement as experience has dictated the necessity.

LEAGUER'S WIT FLAYS CANDIDATE SHEENAN

CHARLES J. KIDNEY, IN OPEN LETTER, ATTACKS WARD 17 "CARPET BAGGER."

Charles J. Kidney, Independence League candidate for the House of Representatives in Ward 17, who is making a remarkable campaign against the methods adopted by the coterie of inner circle members of the Tammany Club, the Curleys' personal organization, in inducing a resident of Ward 20 for the Legislature, Councilman Frederick M. J. Sheenan of No. 5 Holiday street, Dorchester, at a meeting of his friends last evening announced his intention of bringing home to the minds of the voters of the district the fact that there are men in Ward 17 who are eminently qualified to fill the offices to which the loyalty is entitled without going to Dorchester for candidates.

That Mr. Sheenan is rather sceptical about how the people feel about his candidacy is evidenced in the speech given him by leader "Tom" Curley, himself a resident of Dorchester, and who is desirous to go down in ferret before the onslaught of the champion of the people's rights, the Hon. Michael J. McEttrick, his opponent. He has appointed prominent city officials and employes of the city to "whoop up" a sentiment to overcome the "carpet bagger" by Mr. Kidney. This has been tried so often in the past that the voters are gradually breaking away from coercive methods and vow that no self-constituted leader can sweep them from their support of ex-Michael J. McEttrick and Charles J. Kidney.

Open Letter from Kidney.

That the residents of Ward 17 may thoroughly comprehend the exact status of affairs, and that Mr. Sheenan's bona fide residence be shown to the voters of the ward, Mr. Kidney has issued the following open letter to the candidate from his office:

Holiday street, Ward 20, Dorchester:

Sir—A week ago I addressed you in an open letter calling your attention to the fact that you, a member of the Legislature which by the laws of this Commonwealth of Massachusetts, is the only candidate for election to the legislature in which though you are an inhabitant of another ward, being only a resident of Ward 20, the first of May in Ward 17. I have received no reply from you to the letter and therefore conclude that you cannot make answer to my assertions, although you are a lawyer and accustomed to filing answers to declaration.

Asks Sheenan to Withdraw.

"Such being the case, Mr. Sheenan, I call on you in all fairness to remove yourself from the contest and allow the citizens of Ward 17 to have the representation in the Legislature which is their right, guaranteed by the constitution.

"Your home ward, Ward 20, has already more representatives in the Legislature than any other ward in Boston, having three representatives therein, and if that ward can bamboozle the people (though I think you shall fail in the attempt) of Ward 17 into electing you as its non-representative, Ward 20 will have four genuine representatives in the Legislature, while our dear old home ward will only have one.

"Think you the voters of Ward 17 will suffer such a condition of affairs to come about? The very thought of the possibility of such an event transpiring ought to cause the men of the ward to arouse themselves, to take action and prevent the ward from being the laughing stock of its neighbors, and knowing the renown of Ward 17 well I believe they will respond and see to it that an inhabitant of the ward is the only accredited representative of the ward in the House of Representatives.

Amusing Defence of Sheenan.

"We may be humble, Mr. Sheenan, but we know our rights, and we have intelligence enough to know how to vote to maintain them, and one of those rights is to full representation.

"Mr. Sheenan, you did not reply to my letter, but a callow youth from the cow pastures of Dorchester undertook to give me what he thought was a reply on the morning following House Hill, our the other evening. His defence of you was to me very amusing. He said among other things that I ought not expect that a gentleman of Mr. Sheenan's culture and refinement, a lawyer by profession, would want to give up his handsome cottage at No. 5 Holiday street, Ward 20, Dorchester, and dwell among the common people of Ward 17, just for the sake of getting elected to the Legislature; that Mr. Sheenan registered in the ward to go into politics to elevate the citizens and tone of the ward to the same standard that the spirit of a Eliot, the missionary to the Indians in Roxbury long ago, endeavored to plant into the ward as a sort of settler.

"I replied, when he came to a full stop, that Mr. Sheenan came into the ward, but to a settlement in the ward, he had none. He was more to be compared to one of the mighty monsters of the deep who only comes to the surface to blow. Mr. Sheenan is only seen by the voters to the surface of the ward to spout speeches. Think of the young man comparing Sheenan with Missionary Eliot!

"If Eliot had come over to Roxbury from Cambridge and registered for one night only, a very few days before selgwam that took in lodgers and then left again the next morning so as to have his coffee and rolls with his family in Cambridge, how much would he have accomplished in Christianizing the Indians? I tell you the truth that Eliot, like the Jesuit missionaries of Canada and Acadia, was always among the Indians and did not consider himself above so doing.

Shared Joys and Sorrows.

"Their joys were his joys; in their sorrows he shared. Had he not done so he would never have created the lasting impression on them and the translation of the sacred Scriptures into the Indian language yet to be seen at Harvard College would never have been written.

"He and Eliot? The very thought of it ought to make the bones of the dear Eliot, entombed in the Eustis street burying ground, Ward 12, become agitated.

"I further told the young man that there were no Indians now in Ward 17 and that we do not need any of the missionaries in that line; that there was a political band of misguided young men on Hampden street who called themselves Indians, but as children at play like to do. But they are not truly Indians and only play the part as an excuse for holding pow wows with fire-water accompaniment. If they were real Indians some of them would have been dead long ago, having had their scalps removed by Tom Tilden and Tom Phelan, many moons ago.

"It is quite true that they are savage once in a while when they read in the BOSTON AMERICAN of the birth of the new Democracy, the Independence League, or when they read in the BOSTON POST of Michael J. McEttrick's 'Reaction on the Second Peasant.'

"And now a word to you, Mr. Sheenan. I have a keen regard for your welfare and you ought to be sufficiently astute than you are now. Get registered from the ward of which you are the inhabitant, Ward 20. Study the political conditions of the ward, study the social and congested conditions of the times, labor in the interests of the real people, not politicians, and you will have the consciousness of satisfaction of duty well performed, whether the citizens of Ward 20 will call on you to become their representative in the lower branch of the Legislature.

"With due consideration for you in your sad plight, a man who won't admit where his rightful home is, I remain,

"Sincerely yours,

"CHARLES J. KIDNEY.

"An inhabitant of Ward 17, Dudley street, and Independence League candidate for the House of Representatives."

DOLAN ACCUSES MONTAGUE OF FALSE APPEAL

NO ONE TO BE "DISPLACED"

Arthur W. Dolan, the Democratic candidate for register of probate, whose contest has been forgotten by Mayor Fitzgerald in his anxiety to elect the machine candidate for District Attorney, last night replied to the question, "Why make a change?" propounded by Councilman David I. Montague of Ward 10, who is now filling the office of register by appointment of Governor Guild.

Speaking at the Revere Town Hall, the East Boston Armory and in Ward 9, Mr. Dolan said:

"My opponent, Councilman Montague, says, 'Why make a change?' This is a false cry.

Mr. Montague was appointed by the Governor five or six weeks ago, when a vacancy occurred in the office of Register of Probate by the promotion of Elijah George to be Judge of Probate. Under the laws of Massachusetts he could only be appointed until his successor was elected and qualified. The statute specifically provides that after the temporary appointment made the Governor could name a special precept for an election to fill the vacancy.

"The statute specifically refers to it as a vacancy. I have in my possession a review from the Secretary of the Commonwealth that I have been nominated for a vacancy, and I say to Mr. Montague that there is no vacancy, that the people, in accordance with the intent of the statute, are going to elect a register of probate to fill a vacancy which in the eyes of the statute exists to-day. There is no incumbent of a competitive and experienced official, and Mr. Montague's service has been of such a character as to entitle him to qualify him any more than any other lawyer.

MAINE TEACHER AT $6 A WEEK GETS FORTUNE

Heiress to Dr. Hall's $250,000 Estate Now Lives on Farm He Once Owned.

WILL CUTS OFF DAUGHTERS

BROCKWAY MILLS, Me., Oct. 30.—Miss Cora E. Hall, who inherits $250,000 from an uncle, is a school teacher who earns $6 a week. The estate is that of Dr. James H. Hall, a former resident of Sangerville, who recently died at Trinidad, Col., after making a will cutting off two daughters by a divorced wife with no share in his estate other than that provided by him years ago when Dr. Hall and his first wife separated. Miss Hall was merely hoping her good fortune.

The man who has given her the fortune worked for years blacksmithing, but is supposed to have made money in the hardware business in the West. Thirty-nine years ago Dr. Hall lived at Brockway Mills and was married to Clara Bishop, daughter of Jonathan and Margaret Bishop. A few years later he went to Mt. Forest, Mich., and then to Sheboygan, where he went into the hardware business. Twenty-nine years ago he sold out and went to Colorado. There came an estrangement with his wife and in order to provide for her and his two daughters he deeded to his wife a block of buildings in Denver. Later he secured a divorce and remarried. The second Mrs. Hall has in feeble health and died six or seven years ago.

Miss Cora Hall, the heiress, is the daughter of Asahel and Nancy Hall, and lived here on her father's farm, which was formerly owned jointly by the Hall brothers.

LABOR NEWS

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION COUNCIL NORTON MASS 96

The Roofers' Protective Union of Boston has called a strike on those firms which have not complied with the terms of their last request, an increase of wages.

The union asked for a 50 cent raise last year and received the raise from some, got an agreement from others that they would grant it, and from a few employers got nothing from others. Some granted a raise of 25 cents with a promise to give the other 25 cents later.

The union has now taken steps to equalize all these different arrangements. Where there are agreements calling for the total raise of 50 cents they will insist on it, where the union is satisfied, but where there are no agreements a demand is made that the 50 cents per day raise be given.

It has been necessary so far this week to strike only a few jobs, as most of the already demanded for roofers just now, an early settled one is expected. Rain has had a delaying effect, but as soon as the weather clears up for the union will take steps to fill the vacancies now existing in the 25 cent increase firms which have signed the agreement, and in case those who are holding out fail into line and give satisfactory guarantees to proceed similarly by granting the wage demand.

The blood and the organs cease to perform their important functions properly, causing affliction, accompanied by the following distressing symptoms: Tired feeling, poor appetite, coated tongue, blotches or pimples on the face, roaring, buzzing sound in the head, pain in the side, back and under the shoulder blade, night sweats, skin troubles, etc., due to ailments arising from the blood, kidneys, stomach and liver. PLANS COMPLETE FOR BARN DANCE

Arrangements are all completed for the barn dance in Codman Hall, Adams street, to be held this evening under the auspices of Division No. 18, Ladies' Auxiliary, of the A. O. H. There will be plenty of enjoyment for all those who will attend. Old time costumes will be worn, and dairy maids and huskers will be represented by some of the prominent young men and women in the Dorchester district. The affair will eclipse all previous undertakings of the organization, and the committee, consisting of Margaret Cummings, Beatie D. Locke, Anna C. Daley, Mrs. Mary Gilhooley and Nellie Lawton, have worked unfiringly with that end in view.

DANGER SIGNALS

A short hacking cough, irritated throat, raising of frothy or heavy yellow phlegm, white or blood-stained phlegm, pain over the chest, bronchial tubes or lungs, slight exertion causing difficult breathing, flushes on the cheeks toward evening, steady loss of flesh and weakness—all these are nature's danger signals.

Don't wait for these to take our treatment—INHALATORIUM TREATMENT is more successful than any other doctors in our locality. Consumption is the most dreaded of all diseases, and people fear to consult a doctor's office in New England.

Our system of treatment is unique, and in using it to cure our cases, and that is the reason we cure more people than any other doctor.

CATARRH, BRONCHITIS, CONSUMPTION—that is the order in which they follow each other. Don't neglect CATARRH and you will not have BRONCHITIS. Don't neglect BRONCHITIS and you will not have CONSUMPTION. Don't neglect CATARRH and you will not have CATARRH. Don't neglect CATARRH and you will not have CONSUMPTION. Don't neglect CATARRH and you will not have CATARRH.

CONSUMPTION, THE INHALATORIUM CABINET cures these three diseases. There need be no doubt in the mind of any person, for it has the indorsement of the American Congress on Tuberculosis, and is used in the leading sanitariums of the country.

Take advantage of the good weather now existing, before winter sets in, and you will remember we cure not only CONSUMPTION and CATARRH, but also CHRONIC ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, KIDNEYS, RHEUMATISM, DEAFNESS, HEAD NOISES, NERVOUSNESS, EARS and other diseases of the head and throat.

LEARN TO EAT.

Few People in Boston Really Know How.

This is not an essay on table manners.

It is simply a little good advice about one of the great American defects—too rapid eating.

Nothing makes life so miserable, or interferes so widely with the usefulness of the average American, as indigestion.

The quick-lunch counters and the great majority of restaurants, even the home dining-rooms, are simply manufactories of stomach troubles.

Slow eating will solve one-half the problem of ill health. Those who suffer already with indigestion and weak stomach can with care and the use of Mi-o-na stomach tablets restore their digestion to a healthy condition, so that they can eat what they want at any time without fear of distress or suffering.

After a few days' use of Mi-o-na stomach tablets, the headache, dizzy feeling, drowsiness, bad taste in the mouth, coated tongue, nervousness, sleeplessness, distress after eating—all these symptoms of a weak stomach—will disappear, and perfect digestion and a good skin will show that the vital machinery is once more running smoothly.

Take a little Mi-o-na tablet before each meal, so that it will stimulate the digestive juices and give strength to the stomach, and then it will take care of the food that is eaten, without indigestion and the unpleasant full feeling with which so many suffer after meals.

Mi-o-na is sold by druggists everywhere for 50 cents, and we positively guarantee to refund your money should you purchase a box and be dissatisfied with results. Write for free sample, addressing Booth's Mi-o-na, Box 977, Buffalo, N. Y.

E. GERRY BROWN SCORES DRAPERS' PITILESS RULE IN HOPEDALE

League Candidate for Lieutenant-Governor Thrills Big Audience in Lynn with Appeal to Labor to Defend Its Rights.

paid-up union card in my hands and say that the slogan of the labor State convention is: 'Elect your friends and wherever possible stand by the union card.

"And if Mr. Sennoded thinks simply by his say so that the labor men are going to support him, my we will soon see the verdict. All through Essex county last year he said: 'Which are you going to have, the man or the dollar?' Where are you, Mr. Sennoded, with the man or with the dollar?

The Story of Hopedale.

"The man who travelled through this country along about 1845 or 1850 were told what a beautiful example of social democracy there was in the United States. There none was rich and none was unduly poor and it was at that time, my friends, that men and women, having what might be called at that time a sufficiency of the world's goods, thought that they would try to lead simple life they thought the Lord wanted them to lead.

"They Ballou called together a number of people. They went up into what is now called Hopedale or part of Milford, where there were beautiful hills and valleys and air their feet flowed, gently, the river.

"Indeed, it was a beautiful spot that Nature made it. It hasn't yet been spoiled.

Hopedale owned by the Drapers, the houses owned by the Drapers, trees owned by the Drapers, grass owned by the Drapers, sign says, 'Keep off the grass, G. O. Draper.'

The Two Drapers.

"There were two brothers who were interested in Hopedale. One believed in principle and the other didn't. Their names were Draper. They owned practically all stock, and this beautiful community went out of existence. Machine shops were the wheels of machinery and out of that river and out of that power continued to come money.

"One of the first things they did was to go down to the Legislature in 1856 and ask the Legislature to take three square miles of territory and make it into the town of Hopedale.

How Town Is Taxed.

"Hopedale was established and that is the Hopedale you have to-day, three square miles of territory taken from Milford. It is assessed, and you will understand that the Drapers do their own assessing through the men who live in their houses, who are employed by the people of Hopedale, for $5,000,000.

"Five million dollars is the assessed value. You yourself know well what the Drapers are supposed to be worth, the $5,000,000 is the assessed value and $6 is the rate per thousand, while over in poor old Milford the tax rate is $20 per thousand.

"The foremen and sub-foremen and the bosses live in Hopedale, but the great mass of the help is over in Milford.

"The Drapers have built houses for their help right on the edge of Milford, with its tax rate of $20 a thousand.

Poor Schools for Children.

"Does you know that the only ray of sunshine that can come into the workingman's home is when the little one comes? Then is where the living spirit is awakened when the little unborn comes into the family.

"You find in all the workingmen's homes the baby carriage, and the children of the people who work in Hopedale are to be put in schools built by Milford.

"Building houses over in Milford for the help so that the children who are over there can be supported by Milford. Practical to the last degree.

"Let me touch upon one more point. At the convention of the American Federation in Milford the common report was that the labor men were going to help Mr. Draper.

"They had been converted, educated, as Mr. Whitney would have it, and the newspapers gave out stories that the President of the Central Labor Union at Milford had come out for Hopedale.

"He rose at the convention and denied it. Our secretary was accused of riding in Mr. Draper's automobile, but he denied having seen Mr. Draper. Thinking I might be an opinion in the convention I waited to see if manifest itself.

"A motion was made by a delegate, innocently enough it now appears, but the motion was voted down.

The Hopedale Visit.

"I move, Mr. Chairman, that if we haven't anything else to do we go over to Hopedale," whereupon I arose in my seat and said, 'I object to the motion to go to either hell or Hopedale, because I think we ought not to set our seal upon either place,' and the newspapers reported me as saying that I didn't care whether they went to hell or Hopedale.

"I then went on to say that I had been to Hopedale myself and I hoped that every brother delegate would go to Hopedale, and I was represented as trying to keep them from going to Hopedale for fear if they went they would change their votes.

"I said also, by way of ridicule of Hopedale, not only in the afternoon, but, my brothers, you want to go there at 6 o'clock, as we did at Lawrence, and see the help going in to work, and they are a number of them.

"I did. I came down Water street from Hopedale and saw these people go into the mill.

Little Ones in Mills.

"They are our brothers if there is a union label. And the little fellow—in knickerbreeches—he was also a workeras if he is under age for the purpose of our protection.

"You will ask them how far it is to Hopedale and they say sixteen years. Or what time it is and it is sixteen years. They have been from six to sixteen years. They are put sixteen years drilled into them, because that is the age when they say one who sees them can use their own judgment and they will go to work. Little boys of fourteen are going to work in Hopedale.

"I have not said that the average wage is $7.50. I have said the wages are as low as $7.50, and when I have called Mr. Draper to name the wage he says an average.

"I ask you what difference does it make to you if they are getting $10 a week and the man next to you is getting $20?

Czars of Hopedale.

"What is there to you if you are getting an average of $10? How does that help you? It doesn't—but it helps Mr. Draper and the wages of the workmen with the others and tell what the average wage is sold.

"It doesn't help a man who is getting $7.50 a week to support a family, out of which comes the rent, the coal, the clothing, the cost and the groceries, and what little he has left to spend for anything else and which they are supposed to raise their family and educate them.

Plan to Divide Forces.

"But why is it that they are not permitted to own their own homes? Because several years ago the people there, they are subject to the will of the man who does own them and there is no escape from him.

"He says that I am trying to divide the people of this State, and even of the whole United States, as a skilful and victorious combatant of that most powerful of monopolies, the Standard Oil Company.

Hisgen's Childhood Days.

"No man could be found who is more competent to stand before an audience and talk about Thomas L. Hisgen, than myself, for I have known him for years. I knew him as a boy whom I played with—a bright, manly boy and the way of even then ready to champion the cause of the weak and oppressed.

"I called him Tom then. I call him Tom now, and I shall continue to call him Tom until that happy day when I hope I shall be able to have the honor of addressing him as His Excellency, Governor of Massachusetts. (Cheers.)

"He always showed his hand for the right when opposed by the wrong. He always had a helping hand for the weak and oppressed and he has continued on until this day.

"But here is the story of the man. Tom Hisgen, that I promised to tell you.

"You and I are living in two distinct worlds. I am living in a world of darkness; you are living by the aid of the bright lights here to-night, which allow you to look with pride in the faces of your fellows.

"I look around, but see no light, nor any of your faces before me, from which to gain inspiration for my speech. I face nothing but darkness and feel but a dark cloud

Faced Death Without Funds.

"One night sixteen years ago I awoke to find myself stricken blind. I tried doctor after doctor, and they all took my money and encouraged me, and I was buoyed with the hope that some day I might be restored sight, but that day has never come.

"After two years I was penniless and in debt, lacking the money for which to pay for the necessities of life for myself and my family. I could see nothing but starvation before me, unless I went to the poor house, and I would rather die.

"Then the terrible thought of self-destruction came to me. Such was my mental agony that I was ready to end my existence, when the unforeseen occurred. And something did happen.

"That something was Thomas L. Hisgen. He came to me that night and as he sat beside me and held me in his with his strong right arm around my neck, I told him all.

"Never shall I forget that voice of his that night. 'Cheer up, old man,' he said 'I am your friend and you have many other friends. Something will be done for you.' What do you mean? I asked him. Never mind, leave that to me,' he said and Tom left me.

Trust Killer Saved Life.

"He went around among my old friends and got the press interested, and got up a concert. It was a great entertainment, and as to the financial success, he came to me and put two pieces of paper in my hand—two five hundred dollar bills.

"Do you know what that $1,000 meant to me? It meant, life, salvation, support for my family, and some measure of happiness until I could educate myself for a profession which has afforded me a good living ever since.

Anson B. Edgerly, the first speaker, paid a great compliment as he likened Hisgen to the Paul Revere of the Revolution, who warned the people of Middlesex of the peril that impended them.

The Paul Revere, he said, warned the people of the Revolution of the tyrannical power. The trusts now exact extort money from the people; but only one Paul Revere of to-day is up and warning them of the evils with which we are surrounded.

Mr. Clifford eloquently explained the principles of the Independence League. Mr. Flaherty held his audience closely and evoked much applause and laughter by his rhetorical as well as by his subtle and political inconsistencies in the two old parties of to-day.

He declared that when the Democratic party in half a century was able to elect to the head of the State ticket only six times, it was opportune for the League to present some effective opposition to the boss-ruled Republican organization.

"So we have made Thomas L. Hisgen the only logical candidate on the other side and he'll poll 50,000 votes by it.

"That's a supporta Guild. What better proof that Guild does the bidding of Mellen and the railroads? I say to you, ladies and gentlemen, if I, Lucius Sturgeon Pill see to it that the little dealer gets a chance, that the same conditions are not there that are and that every good man and good measure gets a square deal."

Three cheers and a tiger were given for Thomas L. Hisgen.

Comparison of Men.

Clement L. Pollock followed and, indorsing the sentiments of Mr. Hisgen, called attention to the fact that Governor Guild and Mr. Whitney were not one cherry, as well as the genial countenance of the Independence League candidate.

Mr. Pollock invited them to consider the record of Governor Guild and to note the integrity and grit indicated in that of the Independence candidate and to determine for themselves if he were not the man the State needed at this critical time.

P. J. Eaton, business agent for the Carpenters' Union, closed the evening in his usual forcible manner, and he was followed by Chairman Sumner Pollock, who made a few remarks in behalf of the Independence League.

Christian Quit Republicans.

General Organizer W. J. Shields was first introduced by the chairman, who urged prompt attendance at union meetings, and called on all times and gave an interesting history of unionism for the benefit of all.

James C. Christian, Independence League candidate for senator from Wards 23 and 24, followed, saying he had been a fairly consistent Republican until now and urged every one present to embrace the doctrines of the Independence League.

Thomas O'Brien, chairman of the local congressional executive committee, gave his strike experiences of the past few months and said:

"Every sensible man abhors a strike, but those of you who inquire into the inner facts of the late telegraphers' strike could not but be surprised at the oppressive conditions imposed.

"We wanted eight hours and God knows that eight hours a day is long enough for a skilled human being to work."

HISGEN PROMISES LABOR MEN TO ENFORCE LAWS

"NO MORE IMMUNITY FOR CORPORATIONS," HE TELLS DORCHESTER CARPENTERS.

As guest and speaker at the eighth anniversary meeting of Carpenters' Union, Local No. 386, Dorchester, last evening, Thomas L. Hisgen, Independence League candidate for Governor, was received with every demonstration of confidence and heard with careful attention by an audience completely filling Music Hall, Field's Corner, and composed of members of the Carpenters' Union, their friends and sympathizers.

Candidate Thomas L. Hisgen at the opening of his oration from the workingman's standpoint when he pleaded for fairness in dealing upon oppressive trusts if elected Governor, and explaining his position generally, as well as his business men and a proprietor.

"And if elected Governor I will clean out the commissions that are failing in their duty and will enforce the law to balk the criminal supply the trusts and stop the robbery trusts and stop encouraging ill-legitimate enterprise and individual.

Candidate Thomas L. Hisgen was heartily and repeatedly applauded. He was accompanied by Clement L. Pollock, Joseph Calderwood, William A. Sawyer, arriving at 9:45 by automobile from a Lynn rally.

Power Behind the Throne.

"I am pleased to see the ladies here to-night. The power behind the throne and they know the real issue, because on Saturday night they do a little bookkeeping and figure up the cost of the table, the kitchen and the whole sorry apparatus.

"My friends, there was never a time in the history of this commonwealth when there was such a crying need for concerted action. A working people are against the lare necessities, the trusts are getting all.

"Join the union carpenters and to the union labor ticket generally. I say organized labor has a right to expect your sympathy with your efforts for reasonable hours and reasonable compensation. I also believe in a trial by jury in court contempt cases and I also believe in a restriction of certain powers of the courts where they are suppressed sentiments of the American Federation of Labor.

"How many closely understand the gross injustice of the Milk Trust methods, that say to the farmer we will give you so much per quart and no more, and they put it to the users for the highest possible price!

Wage Earners Balked by Trusts.

"Working people should have telephones in their homes with which they can call for help in case of sickness, or can send for a physician in cases of life or death in the middle of the night, but the trusts in charge of the telephone system, from controlling the watering of stock, is in favor of tolls prohibitive to the toilers.

"My friends, the Gas and Electric Oil Company is another example. To heat me house with gas costs $40 per month, and cheaper in districts where my firm did business. Now, I ask you, why should we have to pay in added prices for what the Standard Oil Company would give away for?

"I charge Governor Guild with having been responsible for killing in the Senate a bill that I introduced to prevent discrimination.

"Senator Guild thereafter: 'We have passed a law, which is one of the most excellent measure.' By doing

BROWN TO BARE HUB SECRET AT LEAGUE'S RALLY

Big Surprise Promised for Tremont Temple Meeting Saturday Night.

E. Gerry Brown, Independence League candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, promises Boston a sensation in his Saturday night speech in Tremont Temple, when the League's orators wind up two weeks of successful fighting all along the line from the Cape to the Berkshires.

He shall have something to say on Saturday night, Mr. Brown declared to-day to a reporter for the AMERICAN, "calculated to astonish the natives of the town of Boston. No, I shall give no hint at the time of writing of what it will be, but I am to speak to-night at Lawrence, and to-morrow night in Worcester. The matter that I have in mind is of especial moment to Boston and I mean to hold onto it until I come to Tremont Temple.

Mr. Brown will make his talk part in Saturday night's Boston demonstration, which is intended to outdo all previous efforts. On the list of speakers are Thomas L. Hisgen, West Springfield, candidate for governor; Mr. Brown, Washington A. Coles, the blind orator of Dorchester; Judge T. Aspinwall Bayley, William W. Osgood, well-known Boston attorney, and Gerry Greenfield Parkhurst, formerly chairman of the executive committee of the Republican League and son of Rev. Charles Parkhurst, formerly chairman of the executive committee of the Republican League and son of Rev. Charles Parkhurst. He is taking a prominent part in the campaign of District Attorney John B. Moran.

Beaumont's Boston band has been engaged for Saturday night. The speaking will be preceded by a splendid torchlight, and the speechmaking interspersed with popular selections. None of the speeches will be long. Independence League orators have a way of talking straight to the point.

The first floor and the upper balcony of Tremont Temple will be thrown open to the public. Only the first balcony will be reserved, and this for ladies and their escort. Tickets for the reserved section will be available beginning to-morrow at the State headquarters of the Independence League, No. 348 Old South Building.

SIGHTLESS ORATOR TELLS OF TOM HISGEN, THE MAN

Hundreds of Natick voters of all parties cheered, and many were in tears, as Washington L. Coles of Dorchester last night presented to them a word picture of Thomas L. Hisgen, whom his sightless eyes so vividly saw.

It was an enthusiastic audience that greeted the Independence League leaders in Clark's Hall. The speakers, besides Mr. Coles, the blind orator, were Anson B. Edgerly, candidate for the Senate in the Fifth Suffolk District; Thomas E. Flaherty of Clinton, running for auditor, and Frank E. Clifford of Boston. All were given frequent applause. Dr. Edward R. Dam presided.

A wonderful stillness fell over the crowd as Mr. Coles, with emotion shaking his voice, told what Hisgen, the League candidate for Governor, had done for him.

Saved from Self Destruction.

Strong men were seen to put their hand kerchiefs to their eyes as the sightless man described how Hisgen had arrested his hand, bent on self destruction after his affliction, and raised $1,000 by his personal efforts.

"That is what Tom Hisgen did for me," he said. "It was true heroism. He didn't give his life to save mine, but he saved a life nevertheless, and the man who will do what he did for me will be the good old Commonwealth of Massachusetts from her enemies within.

"I am going to tell you a little story," said Mr. Coles in beginning his address, "and as it concerns me, I must mention myself.

"You, as voters, should study first the party and then the character of the candidates for whom you cast your ballots. Your rights are vitally affected by the personalities of the men who govern you.

"If you will place in command of the Ship of State the hand of Thomas L. Hisgen, you will spend a happy and prosperous year.

"My object to-night is to tell you what kind of a man Thomas L. Hisgen is. For several years he has been before the people of this State, and even of the whole United States, as a skilful and victorious combatant of that most powerful of monopolies, the Standard Oil Company.

Hisgen's Childhood Days.

"No man could be found who is more competent to stand before an audience and talk about Thomas L. Hisgen, than myself, for I have known him for years. I knew him as a boy whom I played with—a bright, manly boy and the way of even then ready to champion the cause of the weak and oppressed.

"I called him Tom then. I call him Tom now, and I shall continue to call him Tom until that happy day when I hope I shall be able to have the honor of addressing him as His Excellency, Governor of Massachusetts. (Cheers.)

"He always showed his hand for the right when opposed by the wrong. He always had a helping hand for the weak and oppressed and he has continued on until this day.

"But here is the story of the man, Tom Hisgen, that I promised to tell you.

"You and I are living in two distinct worlds. I am living in a world of darkness; you are living by the aid of the bright lights here to-night, which allow you to look with pride in the faces of your fellows.

"I look around, but see no light, nor any of your faces before me, from which to gain inspiration for my speech. I face nothing but darkness and feel but a dark cloud

Faced Death Without Funds.

"One night sixteen years ago I awoke to find myself stricken blind. I tried doctor after doctor, and they all took my money and encouraged me, and I was buoyed with the hope that some day I might be restored sight, but that day has never come.

"After two years I was penniless and in debt, lacking the money for which to pay

OSGOOD POINTS OUT AIMS OF THE LEAGUE

Hon. William X. Osgood in his speech at Lynn said in part:

"We are accused by some editorial friends of Whitney and Mellen of trying to disrupt the Democratic party, and annihilate it. Now disruption and annihilation presuppose substance. There is nothing to disrupt. Nothing remains but disintegration.

"The disruption of the Democratic party has not caused by any outward influences. There good and sufficient reasons for against a worthless body with too little in it to disrupt.

"No, the Independence League has great and nobler work to do, than to wage war against a self-destroyed organization.

"It has no use for the past except to draw inspiration from the founders of the Republic, like Jefferson and his associates, and from the preservers of the Republic, like Lincoln and his coadjutors.

"Indeed, I submit, has not the new party already accomplished much? Are not the voters in the great Simplex State of New York and the historic commonwealth of Massachusetts flocking in vast numbers to its standard?

"Upon that standard they find inscribed, equal rights, popular government, equal rights, no special privilege, no public plunder, honest legislation, justice before the law, liberty and progress.

so we have made Thomas L. Hisgen

M'ETTRICK IN LETTER FLAYS 'BOSS' CURLEY

Michael J. McEttrick, former Congressman from the Tenth Congressional District, now serving as chairman of a committee of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, and who is a candidate for the Senate from the Fourth District, Wards 9, 12 and 17, in opposition to Thomas F. Curley, the leader of the Tammany Club, has sent out an appeal to the voters to beware of men who play their deadliest in quest of information as to how they stand on the senatorial contest now being waged between himself and Mr. Curley.

He says, in part:

"Thomas F. Curley will leave no stone of knavery or trickery unturned to encompass my defeat, and this, too, in defiance of his pledged obligations to obey the will of the voters, which, as chairman of the Ward 17 committee, he has twice sworn fully ignored—once in 1905 and again in 1906, when I won the nomination for the Legislature.

Curley's "Regularity."

This Thomas F. Curley, now so loudly howling for regularity, is the same partisan party-traitor Curley who last year openly repudiated my caucus nomination for the House and actually put in an independent candidate on nomination papers, and, harnessing him in with his Tammany hosed nominee, brazenly drove this strange, ill-matched pair to the political track to accomplish the defeat of the other regularly nominees, but for the second time, almost within the year, the Indignant voters of Thomas F. Curley's disputed home ward told him in a shower of ballots what they thought of his particular brand of regularity. Therefore, in dealing with this man, the voters of Wards 9 and 12 should understand this fact as clearly as it is known to all fellow citizens of Ward 17, now unmistakably branded as the Curley ward.

Hits Fountain Source.

"In making this protest, we wish to be understood as not including or reprobating complaints of unjust treatment in the other two wards. We are simply arraigning the fountain source, the chief motive machinery, that backs the man Thomas F. Curley as its candidate—the ever-rotten one that specks and taints our whole body politic.

"At a distressing time like this, when the price of every necessity of food and living is almost hourly increasing; when every household need, from a pin or a new die to a ton of coal, or from a nursing bottle to the baby's milk which it holds, is climbing higher and higher; when the universal trust, merciless and relentless, is grasping and gripping all; and when only public men of long-tried and tested faith fulness should be elected to public offices for our protection, why, in the name of common sense, should the Thomas F. Curleys ever be preferred for this purpose?"

REPUBLICAN PARTY BLAMED FOR BANK RUN

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 30.—Scoring the Republican party for the failure of the Rhode Island Hospital Trust bank examiner law, Democratic speakers at a mass meeting held in Music Hall last evening literally laid at the door of the Republican machine the responsibility for the present unwholesome state of affairs in banking circles in this city.

Mayor McCarthy and Congressman Daniel L. D. Granger both called the Republicans sharply to account for the delay of three years which has attended the proposition to establish under the state commissioner to exercise an oversight over the banks and trust companies of the State.

Mayor McCarthy warmly praised Colonel Robert H. I. Goddard, the Democratic candidate for United States Senator, for coming to the relief of the banks during the dark hours of last Friday when it looked in the midst of the run as though a general suspension of payment must be made by the larger institutions.

Congressman Granger, after charging the Republicans with responsibility for the direct result of postponing bank legislation, said:

"We are told by Senator Aldrich to study the methods of the Democratic party men of Rhode Island. Look at James H. Higgins. Yes, look at Colonel Goddard and study his methods. To whom did the citizens, irrespective of party, look the other day for assurance as to the stability of our banking institutions, to stay the tide of mistrust?

"Was it to George Peabody Wetmore? No, but it was to Robert H. I. Goddard and to Rathbone Gardner and Richard R. Comstock and other leaders among those whom Senator Aldrich holds up for young men to study."

Governor Higgins and Colonel Goddard were not at the meeting, being engaged in storming the stronghold of Colonel Samuel P. Colt in the town of Barrington and Warren, both of which towns are expected to send Republican delegations to the General Assembly this year.

People ought to know that there are great differences in glasses; in material used; in styles employed; accuracy of the lenses; in suitability or adjustment. And that we are especially well qualified to do thorough justice to our work in all respects—at moderate prices.

While Men Talk Politics and Do the Voting, Yet When All Is Said and Done the Real

Burden of High Prices Falls on Women

Time for Women to Take a Hand in the Situation

By Beatrice Fairfax

TO-DAY I want to have a little talk on a question which ought to interest every mother and wife and daughter in Massachusetts.

I know as well as you do that we are supposed to be beautifully ignorant of the intricacies of the game of politics as played by our fathers and brothers and husbands and sons to these enlightened days when we are not allowed to vote, but I wish I could impress the women of this State with the necessity of swinging their mighty influence for right in the coming election for Governor.

Whether you and I understand "politics" or not we know there is something radically wrong with things as they are. Upon the women first of all, falls the awful burden of high prices for every necessity of the home.

It's the mother who faces the eternal problem of making the weekly income meet the ever-increasing demands of the butcher, the baker, the milkman and the landlord.

It's the woman of the house who spends anxious days and sleepless nights in the attempt to provide nourishing food for her household, clothe her children warmly and neatly and "make both ends meet" in the face of rise after rise in the cost of everything she buys.

Time to Act

ONE of my readers propounded the question to me in a letter the other day. It was a pathetic note and written in confidence—the story of the years of struggle to buy a little home for the old age of herself and her husband, only to see all her hopes fade before the extortion of the few who are fast gaining control of the tremendous resources of the country.

She closed with this sentence: "In looking over my accounts, faithfully kept for over ten years, the increase of everything we buy—and we can not go hungry and unclothed—fairly takes my breath away, along with my little reserve fund. Thank goodness the price of a postage stamp is still two cents."

Now, I do not propose to enter into any discussion of the merger of the New, York, New Haven & Hartford railroad with the Boston & Maine, nor do I intend to talk about any of the "issues" of the campaign as advanced by the horde of orators now travelling up and down the State seeking whom they may beguile, but I do wish to impress the women of Massachusetts that a mighty weapon for good is within their grasp.

The discouraged housewife who finds prices advancing from month to month—almost from week to week—gains nothing at all by arguing with the butcher or the grocerywoman. He is forced to fix his prices by the trusts.

There is no relief in arguing with the clerk when you find it costs you many dollars more for an overcoat for that boy of your's. He is not responsible. There is something wrong with the system and the remedy must have changed along with prices. strike behind all these.

Talk It Over

THE only real remedy is at the polls. If anything is to be done it must be done by the men of the family with their ballots next Tuesday.

And here is where we women can exert our influence for our home and our children. We cannot vote, to be sure, but we can have a little heart-to-heart talk with the men who do.

You can urge that husband of yours who has been voting one of the old party tickets for years in the face of his the treatment he has received at the hands of the monopolists that he might do well to make a change—as a rebuke, if for no other reason.

You can show that son of yours the error of declaring himself a Republican or a Democrat, just because that's how his father was. Teach him that times have changed along with prices.

"We Can Help"

AND now, having said this much, I want to tell you what inspired me to write.

Yesterday I had the privilege of meeting Mr. Thomas L. Hisgen of Springfield, the Independence League candidate for Governor. I wish every one of my friends could have the same pleasure. I wish you could be impressed as I was with his overpowering sincerity in his battle against Trust control.

I wish you could talk with him as I did. I know he would convince you of his bulldog determination to fight against oppression until your battle and mine is won for us.

And meanwhile you and I can help, through our mighty power to influence the men who will vote on next Tuesday. Think the question over and see if you don't think it's time we women took a hand in politics.

WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO ABOUT IT?

"THE TURN OF THE BALANCE"

A Thrilling Story of American Life by Brand Whitlock

(Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

HE sat there for two hours that afternoon, glad of the delay because the longer it was the stronger his hope. He watched her in the beautiful in the seal-skin jacket that fitted her slender figure so well; he saw, with its touch of green became her dark hair. He noted, then, that her head was bowed and of her eyes behind the veil.

He remembered her as he had seen her that last day she came into her father's office—remembered how his own sick heart had been under its load of guilty fears.

He recalled the affection her father had shown, how his tired face had lighted when he saw her.

Graves remembered that the smile had filled him with a pity for Ward; he seemed once more to see Ward fondly watching the little gloved hand and hold it while he looked up at her, and how he had laughed and evidently joked her as he swung about to his desk and wrote out a check.

And then, as she went out, she had smiled at the clerks and spoken to them; she had smiled on him and on Ward, who would she smile now, this day?

The hope leaped wild in his heart, if she did! She was the apple of her father's eye—he would do anything for her; if she would but see and recognize him now, give him the least hint of encouragement or permission, he would go to her, would speak to her father and he would help him.

His whole being seemed to melt within him—he half started from his chair—his eyes were wide with the excitement of this hope. He never once took them from her; he must not permit an instant to escape him, lest she lost his way. He watched her as she sat by the window; she made a picture he never could forget. Once she turned.

Ah! It was coming now!—but no—yes, she was moving! She had gone into the other room. He hoped now that his ease would be one of the last. He must see her. After a while the agent beckoned him, looked at him suspiciously, and said:

Lost Again!

"How long have you been out?"

"A month," said Graves.

"Well, I haven't got no use for convicts," said the agent.

Graves waited in the hall. He waited until it was dark, but not so dark that the agent could not recognize him.

"You needn't hang around," he said; "there's nothing to steal here."

Graves waited, then, quietly. He feared he would miss Elizabeth in the dark, or confuse her among the other women. The thought made him almost frantic.

The women came out, and finally—yes, it was Elizabeth! He could nowhere mistake that figure. He pressed up, he spoke, he put forth a hand to touch her—she turned with a start of fright. He saw a policeman looking at him narrowly. And then he gave up, slunk off, and was lost in the crowd.

He—women of a certain kind," this note determined her, and "We've had big audiences all the week; it would have helped you to see them struggling and men are superior to your emotional natures, and rise above them and control them."

Justice?

"Well, not always. We become emotional, but our emotions are usually excited on the side of justice."

"What is that?"

"Justice? Why—well——"

"You mean 'an eye for an eye,' I suppose, and 'a life for a life'?" Elizabeth looked at him steadily, and he feared she was making him ridiculous.

TO BE CONTINUED.

Legal Killing

Eades chose to forget how entirely the crowd had sympathized with him, and how the atmosphere of the trial had been wholly against the wretch.

"Well, I'll promise not to send him any flowers," Elizabeth said quickly. "He'll have to hang!"

"No, not hang; we don't hang people in this State any more; we electrocute them. But I forget; Gordon Marriott told me I mustn't say 'electrocute'; he says there is no such word."

"Gordon is particular," Elizabeth observed with a laugh.

Eades thought she laughed sympathetically; and he wanted all her sympathy for himself just then.

"He calls it killing." Eades grasped the word boldly, like a hero.

"Gordon doesn't believe in capital punishment."

"So I understand."

"I don't either."

Her tone startled him. He glanced up. She was looking at him steadily.

"Did you read of this man's crimes?" he asked.

"No, I don't read about crimes."

"Then I'll spare you. Only, he shot a man down in cold blood; there were eyewitnesses; there is no doubt of his guilt. He made no defence."

"Then it couldn't have been hard to convict him."

"No," Eades admitted, though he did not like this deduction from his triumph. "But the responsibility is great."

"I should imagine so."

He did not know exactly what she meant; he wondered if this were sarcasm.

"It is indeed," he insisted.

"You have sent on," "I know it must be. I couldn't bear it myself. I'm glad women are not called to such responsibilities. I believe it is said—isn't it?—that their very presence restrains evil men." She was smiling.

"You're saying now," he said, leaning back in his chair.

"Oh, indeed, no! Of course, I know nothing about such things, save that you have asked me to use my emotional nature, and rise above them and control them."

Justice?

"Well, not always. We become emotional, but our emotions are usually excited on the side of justice."

"What is that?"

"Justice? Why—well——"

"You mean 'an eye for an eye,' I suppose, and 'a life for a life'?" Elizabeth looked at him steadily, and he feared she was making him ridiculous.

TO BE CONTINUED.

A HINT FROM THE JEWELER

"YOU say that you want some name engraved on this ring?" said the jeweler to the bashful young man.

"Yes; I want the words 'George, to his dearest Alice,' engraved on the inside of the ring."

"Is the young lady your sister?"

"No, she is the young lady to whom I am engaged."

"Well, if I were you, I would not have 'George, to his dearest Alice,' engraved on the ring. If Alice changes her mind, you can't use the ring again."

"What would you suggest?"

He would suggest that the words be, 'George, to his first and only love.' You see, with that inscription you can use the ring half a dozen times. I have had experience in such matters myself."

This Single Recipe Makes Six Dishes

HERE'S a novelty in cooking. This woman has found, after a great many experiments, that no less than six tasty, attractive and extremely economical dishes may be made from this one simple but reliable formula, properly carried out.

The ingredients required are: One quart of sifted flour, five teaspoonfuls of baking powder, half a cupful of butter, one small teaspoonful of sugar, half a teaspoonful of salt and sufficient milk to make the dough of a soft consistency.

The method of mixing is to sift the baking powder with the flour. Then add the butter, which must previously have been cut into small pieces, and follow with the sugar and salt. Mix all these ingredients together thoroughly with the hands, rubbing the butter well into the flour, after which add the milk. The mix as lightly and handle as little as possible.

With this dough as a foundation it will be easy to prepare any one of the following dishes:

1. TEA BISCUITS.—Place the dough on the mixing board and flatten it with the hand until it is not more than an inch in thickness, but do not use the rolling pin for this purpose. Cut the biscuits with a tumbler, cup or biscuit cutter and bake in a buttered pan in a moderately hot oven for about half an hour.

2. DUTCH ROLLS.—Roll the dough out until it is about half an inch thick; then cut it with small bits of butter about half an inch apart. Sprinkle generously with sugar and roll up like jelly roll. Then cut in slices, each about an inch thick, and bake in a well-buttered pan in a hot oven for about half an hour.

3. RAISED LOAF.—Make the mixture as directed, but add half a pound of raisins before adding the milk. Then make in a bread tin in a slow oven for three-quarters of an hour.

4. SHORTCAKE.—Mix as directed; then bake in a round tin for half an hour. Split the cakes and butter them while hot; afterward place a layer of fresh fruit or preserves between them and serve with sifted sugar and whipped cream.

5. ROLLY-POLY PUDDING.—Mix as directed; roll the dough until it is about half an inch thick; then cover it with fresh fruit and roll it up. Place it in a granite dish or earthen bowl and steam for half an hour. If preferred, the dough may be covered with jam or jelly, and after being rolled up tightly, baked, a process that will make these delicacies of no less value.

6. PIE CRUST.—This mixture will also make a good pie crust, and is especially good when used in making meat pies.

SAFE WAY TO SHIP PRESERVES

OFTEN one wishes to send some preserves, butters or jellies to friends at a distance, yet the very thought of broken jars, etc., reminds one of a wreck ago equal to sending explosives by mail. And yet it is the easiest matter in the world to send one or two quarts or gallons if desired by placing the fruit in tin pail baskets and sealing around the edge of the pail with paste-pattern paper similar to that in which butter is packed. Then the pail is packed in a box, and when it arrives it can be placed in jars and properly sealed. Tomatoes can be canned and pass-pattern placed over the sealing to make a good, tight cover, and as far from the cans; in fact, they could not, for they would spoil.

Cook Book Free For Choice Recipes

THE writer of every recipe printed below receives a copy of the BOSTON AMERICAN Economy Cook Book, a substantial indexed blankbook of 210 pages, bound in heavy oilcloth, especially designed to preserve these recipe gems in permanent form.

SPICED GRAPES

Five pounds grapes, four pounds sugar, one tablespoonful each of cinnamon and cloves, one pint of vinegar. Boil vinegar and sugar together until all of the sugar is dissolved. Seed the grapes and add to the vinegar and sugar and boil one-half hour. Add spice and boil a few minutes. This is especially good as a relish with cold meats, and it has the advantage of never fermenting or tasting mouldy, no matter how long it is kept, if it is properly covered up from the air.

Expert Nurse Tells How to Keep Baby in Best of Health

By Sarah Behn-Randall

THE BABY AND FRESH AIR

MOST of the illnesses which come to children who have been born healthy are attributable to the lack of fresh air and the unsanitary surroundings in which they are kept.

It is not only an easy matter, but it is altogether probable, that a child will contract consumption if confined in an unclean room and not permitted to get fresh air. On the other hand, many babies who have been predisposed to consumption, the great annihilator of childhood, have been permanently cured by keeping them continuously in the open air.

From the time a baby is a few months old it should be kept out of doors in the open air as much as possible. When I say possible, I do not mean that a mother should take the baby out in its carriage twice a day for an hour each time. I mean that the mother should take the baby out early in the morning and stay out all day.

The baby's health is more important than housework, and if you start the baby right it will go a long way toward keeping the child in good health in later years.

The best way to-day is to take the baby out right after breakfast, as early as possible, for the morning air is best. If it is a bottle-fed baby, the mother may take along several bottles, which have been heated and wrapped in flannel cloths to retain the heat for several hours.

Take Babe Out

OF course, it is tiresome if one wheels a baby buggy all day, but the mother may take her sewing along with her and sit for hours in the parks alongside of the buggy.

Even in cold weather it is necessary to get the baby out. I know of many, many instances where the baby has been taken out for all day when the weather was below freezing, and when the mother and a nurse-maid would relieve each other so that one or the other could run into the house and get warm.

In cold weather, the baby should be wrapped very warmly, with the head considered securely with a padded hood and with a thick veil over the face. This keeps the child wind from the tender skin of the face, yet permits the breathing of the pure, fresh air.

Of course, that is when the baby is very young. When it grows older you will observe that it likes the cold, fresh air and resents staying indoors. Then it needs no veil.

The baby sleeps in its buggy while it is out, and is fed while it is out. In these cases I imagine the mothers have kept the babies out from 7 or 8 o'clock in the morning until dusk, in all sorts of weather except rain and blizzards. Even a good, cheerful fall or snow will not hurt the child if it is wrapped warmly. In fact, in cold weather you will observe that such a baby is more cheerful and happy than in any other kind of weather.

Gives Baby Sleep

THEN, when the baby is brought in for the night, the parents will observe that it sleeps soundly throughout the night without disturbing them.

Its crib should be in a room that is well ventilated. That means that there must be a current of air through the room, not a draught. The windows should be open as much as possible. The room should be cold and the baby well covered.

Under no circumstances should the baby sleep in a bed with its parents. It is not only dangerous, because an older person may roll on the baby, but it is unsanitary, for the baby frequently gets covered head and all, and is apt to breathe the exhaled breath of the older person.

I know that poor mothers will say they cannot keep the baby out all day, or even a good part of it, and do their household duties. But in this case the baby should be tucked in its buggy and placed out on the sidewalk in front of the house, where the busy mother can give it a glance to now and then.

Must Have Fresh Air

IF this is not possible, because of the location of the house's flat, the baby should be bundled up and placed in a room in which all of the windows are open—wide open—no matter what kind of weather.

And it should be placed as near the open window as possible. I want to impress mothers with the very important fact that their babies must have fresh air and twenty-four hours of it, no matter how they get it.

By giving your child a pair of healthy lungs, which can come only through fresh and pure air, you reduce stomach troubles to a minimum and build a strong foundation for the future health of the child.

It is a positive crime to keep an infant, a baby or a child, cooped up in the house, no matter how fine your home may be. The child is helpless and cannot get out unless you send it out.

The responsibility is yours and in later years the poor health of your child will accuse you. Then it will be too late. Get that child out of doors, every day and all day!

STUDY FINE ART OF DRESSING

AFTER all is said and done, the success of a gown is very largely dependent upon the accessories that accompany it. Gloves, shoes, hosiery, parasol, veil, belt and the numberless other small details—each of them has the power to make or mar a costume.

This the really well-dressed woman knows, and it is here that she scores over her sister-dressers.

She recognizes the importance of these subtly misunderstood minor details and gives particular attention to them. She knows intimately what sort of footwear may appropriately accompany each separate gown, what veil and hose to arrange it, and so on through the whole category of small things, and by these insights uses having these things and wearing them precisely as they should be worn.

SODA IN SAUCEPAN

Every saucepan that has been used and finished with should be filled with cold water, a heaping spoonful put into it, and set on the stove to boil out.

Food Poisons.

90 Per Cent of All Diseases the Result of Undigested Putrefying Foods.

Men of affairs, women of society and children with active brains are too often sedentary in their habits, giving little time to exercise. To this evil is added that of high and irregular living—as a result, the stomach cannot stand the demands made upon it. The abused and overtaxed stomach does not properly do the work of digestion, food taken in ferments and the poison permeates the whole system. The body loses in weight and becomes a prey for the attack of whatever disease it may encounter.

Did it ever occur to you how busy that stomach of yours is? It only holds three pints, but in one year you force it to take in 2,400 pounds of material, digest it and prepare it for assimilation into the blood. No wonder it rebels when overworked. We crowd it with steaks and pastry, irritate its juices with spices and acids, and expect the stomach to do its work. It can't do it.

All over the inner layer of the stomach are glands which secrete the juices necessary to digestion. The entrance of food into the stomach is the signal for these glands to do their work. The more the food, and the more indigestible, the greater the demand upon them and upon the muscles of the wall adjoining.

Think of the tons of high-seasoned sauce, sweetmeats and appetizers crammed into this little four-ounce mill, and then wonder, if you will, why you are dizzy or nauseated or constipated. Don't blame your stomach or curse your fate that you should be born so unfortunate. Blame yourself and apply the remedy.

First, get a small package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, taking one after each meal and at bed time. They are not a medicine, but a digestive. Your stomach is worn out and needs help, not medicine. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will do the work that the stomach fails to do. There's enough power in one grain of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets to digest 3,000 grains of ordinary food, so you needn't fear that anything you eat will remain in your stomach undigested.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will rout the poison because they remove the cause—food fermentation. They are nature's own cure for dyspepsia. The host of troubles dyspepsia is father of cannot be numbered, for a healthy stomach is the source of all health.

Seize your opportunity before worse conditions confront you. Send today for a free trial package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. They will bring your stomach relief. F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

DID THIS GIRL PLOT TO KILL MAN?

Miss Marion Carnie, who hotly denies charge that she conspired with her brother to murder her brother-in-law for $1,500 insurance money.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—"This is a conspiracy of lying by which a loafer and some policemen have tried to make money and a reputation," declared Miss Marion Carnie, when she was indicted with her brother, George, on a charge of conspiring to murder her brother-in-law, William Hulse of Port Richmond, Staten Island, for $1,500 life insurance.

Hulse married Miss Carnie's sister, who died several years ago, and he lived with Miss Carnie's brother, George, and herself. After his wife's death he made Miss Carnie the beneficiary of his insurance.

Was to Marry Her.

According to the police, Hulse intended to marry Miss Carnie but fell in love with another girl. Miss Carnie denies the first part of this statement. At any rate there was a quarrel between Hulse and George Carnie. A man named McKenzie told the police that Carnie later offered him money to get Hulse out of the way.

Detectives investigated and reported that they had had talks with Carnie and his sister in which means of doing away with Hulse were discussed. They say that, with McKenzie, they took a flat and coat to Carnie saying they had killed Hulse and the clothes were taking off his body. Carnie, they say, gave them $50.

Say Story Is Conspiracy.

Miss Carnie and her brother were arrested. Their case went to the Grand Jury four times before an indictment was returned.

The Carnies declare that the whole story originated from a tale Carnie told McKenzie about his quarrel with Hulse; that McKenzie urged him to attack Hulse, but that he forgot all about the affair and that the arrest is a conspiracy.

TEACHER GOES, PUPILS STRIKE

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 30.—Miss Helen T. Roberts of Chicago, a teacher in the Pewaukee (Wis.) High School, has been discharged by the School Board.

All the students in the school went on a strike, claiming Miss Roberts was a victim of the jealousy of other teachers. Parents of the students held a mass meeting and demanded Miss Roberts' reinstatement. The School Board refused to give a reason for discharging her. Fifty-two students struck.

PROBE CRUELTY TO BOY.

PORTLAND, Me., Oct. 30.—An investigation has been begun by the Portland School Board into the brutal treatment recorded Neal Brewer, the fifteen-year-old son of Ernest E. Brewer, during his initiation into a high school secret society.

BODY FOUND NEAR BRIDGE

Early today, the dead body of Cornelius T. Bohoer, twenty-four, of No. 422 Hyde Park avenue, Roxbury, was found at the foot of the railroad embankment about 100 feet beyond the Crescent avenue station of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad. The body was found by Patrick Mahoney, of No. 21 Sowdon street, Dorchester, who stumbled across it on his way to the train.

Bohoer was a brakeman employed by the New Haven. It is believed that he was struck by a bridge while on top of a freight train and his body thrown down the embankment. There is an overhead bridge a short distance south of the Crescent Avenue Station.

RAISE PRICE OF HAIRCUTS

Beginning Friday haircuts in Boston will cost 25 cents. The Barbers' Union has ordered the raise, claiming that the increase dood of supplies has forced them to make an advance. The price of shaves will be optional with the boss barbers. Many will retain the old price of 10 cents. Some of the master barbers are favorable to a rule requiring that no man can buy a haircut unless he agrees to buy a shave at the same time. In Quincy, Weymouth, Bingham, Braintree, Randolph and Holbrook, the barbers have boosted the price of shaves from 10 to 15 cents.

GIRL SOCIALIST SPEAKS.

Anty Drudge Tells How to be Rid of the Smell.

Miss Chirp—"Say, Anty, do you notice that odor? I've just had this waist washed and the laundry soap has made it smell horrid!"

Anty Drudge—"Yes, dear! No one without a cold could fail to notice it. But why don't you have your clothes washed with Fels-Naptha? It will leave them sweet and fresh without any odor. And they'll be cleaner and wear longer than if washed in the old, washboiler way."

Do your clothes have an odor when they come from the wash?

No—if you wash with Fels-Naptha.

Yes—if you use ordinary laundry soap or washing powders.

If you could see what goes into the ordinary soaps and powders, you would understand why they leave the clothes yellow and ill-smelling.

If you could see the pure materials that form a basis for Fels-Naptha you would know why it makes your clothes white and sweet, free from all odors.

Compare clothes washed with Fels-Naptha in cold or lukewarm water with clothes on which ordinary laundry soaps and powders have been used.

No other soap is anything like Fels-Naptha—in results.

Be sure to use Fels-Naptha the Fels-Naptha way, in cold or lukewarm water—no boiling. Get a supply from your grocer. Look for the red and green wrapper.

WEEKS HAD NO CHANCE IN BOUT WITH ATTELL

By Boston American Leased Wire.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 30.—Abe Attell clearly demonstrated that he is by far the best boy of his weight when he whipped Freddie Weeks in the fourth round. While it is true that Weeks was not knocked out, the referee wisely stopped the fight before anything fatal could occur.

In the first round, Attell landed right and left to Weeks's jaw and had Freddie uneasedy on his feet. It looked then as if Weeks could not survive another round, but he surprised everybody by coming up fresh when the second round was called.

In this round Weeks showed to much better advantage. He swapped punches with Attell and caused a faint gleam of hope to arise among his admirers. It might be said that this was the only round in which Weeks appeared to have any chance whatever with the champion. In the third round Attell landed a hard left uppercut to Weeks's stomach, which seemed to take considerable steam out of the Cripple Creek boy. Without giving him a moment's rest, Abe came right back with a straight left, pushing Weeks's head back.

Attell Showed No Mercy.

In the fourth round Abe went after his man, showing no mercy. In all he knocked his man down five times. Weeks was game, however, and rose to his feet each time, before Referee Eyton could count him out. But after a rain of blows Eyton, the referee stepped between the men when Weeks arose after the fifth knockdown and declared Attell the winner.

Charley Eyton was introduced as the referee and gave the boys their instructions.

Fight by Rounds.

ROUND ONE—Weeks pointed a light right to stomach and light left to face. Attell reached the nose twice. Attell was chewing gum. Abe put right swing on Saw and Weeks uppercut right to stomach. Abe landed two lefts to the cheek and repeated the blows. He landed two more lefts to the mouth and landed right hook to the jaw. Abe then planted uppercut to the jaw in the centre of the ring. Weeks appeared groggy. Abe landed two uppercuts to the jaw and many blows to the body, in three clinches Attell swung right to the ear and Weeks countered with a light left to the face. Abe then put stiff right to the jaw and uppercut chance.

ROUND TWO—Weeks right eye was rapidly closing, but he came up fresh. Abe put left hook to the jaw and then swung hard right to the jaw and uppercut with the left, to the same place. Weeks uppercut with right to the stomach and repeated it up to the jaw. Abe landed right on the jaw, and then repeated it. Attell uppercut to the jaw with right and repeated it in the breakaway. Abe put straight left on the nose and repeated the same blow. He landed the same kind of a blow a third time. Weeks swung left to the ear in the clinch in which both men roughed it. Abe put a left to the jaw and Weeks came back with the same kind of a blow. Abe landed four straight lefts to the mouth. Weeks was inclined to use his elbow. Abe swung right to the eye. Weeks put right to the cheek in a clinch and then landed left hook to the jaw. They roughed it in centre of the ring. Abe put three lefts to the mouth at the end of the round. Round about even.

Freddie Falls Down.

ROUND THREE—Abe landed left to the jaw. Weeks put right to the kidneys and Abe put left to the nose. Weeks swung with left, missed and fell down. Weeks put right to stomach. Weeks uppercut with right and repeated with left to the stomach. Abe put two lefts to the mouth and uppercut with right. Abe put left to the mouth and blocked return. In a clinch Weeks landed right to the jaw. Abe landed right swing to eye. They both punched with left in clinch. Abe put right to the stomach as they clinched. He put right to cheek a second later. Attell put straight left swing to the nose, sending Weeks's head back. Abe swung left to the eye. They clinched at the gong. Abe had the best of this round.

ROUND FOUR—Attell put left to the eye and the right to the jaw. He swung right to the ear and repeated with the same blow to the jaw. He swung two rights to the jaw and then uppercut with left to the same place. He knocked Weeks down with a right to the jaw. He repeated the same blow and knocked Weeks down again. He landed two lefts and right and knocked Weeks to the floor a third time. Attell knocked Weeks down for the count and the referee stopped the fight, fearing that Weeks' might be badly injured, as he stood no chance.

Indian Football Star's Great Tackle.

This unique photograph shows Halfback Gardner, of the Carlisle team, shirting Payne to the ground in a practice game. The camera caught the famous Indian player at the finish of a long dive. The redmen are noted for their reckless daring in hurling themselves at a runner, and this picture is a rare illustration.

DOE LEASES BASEBALL GROUNDS AT ROCKY POINT

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 30.—It is reported on reliable authority that President A. J. Doe of the Providence Eastern League Club has secured a personal lease of the baseball grounds at Rocky Point from Colonel R. A. Harrington, manager of that resort.

President Doe is a minor stockholder in the Providence club, and it is believed that his securing the Rocky Point grounds is part of a plant to prevent Hugh Duffy, who carries a majority of the stock in the club, from holding the reins over the Providence team next year.

When Duffy and Doe took over the Providence club early in the year the former became manager. The two soon began to split on badly over affairs of the team that a bitter personal rupture developed. Ever since the breach has widened between them, and it is reported that President Doe would be forced out of the club at the annual directors' meeting, to convene on the return of Manager Duffy to Providence from the National Association meeting which commenced in New York yesterday.

Colonel R. A. Harrington was seen at the Dorrance Hotel about the reported lease of the Rocky Point baseball grounds and confined himself to the statement that he had been bound to secrecy by Mr. Doe, and therefore could give no details of the transaction, adding that he would refer us to him for all interesting news after directors' meeting of the local club.

Colonel Harrington evidently had a clear idea of the nature of the interview which was requested of him, and before there was much talk on the subject said: "Say, you're going to find out about it. Where did you get the information?"

PARKER BACK IN GAME WITH CRIMSON ELEVEN

Captain Parker of the Harvard eleven will get in the game again when the Crimson faces Brown in the Stadium on Saturday. Parker has been suffering with a sprained ankle, but took to the practice yesterday for the first time in two weeks.

The scrimmage work was discouraging, each team scoring five points.

The attack was sluggish and the forwards failed to help the backs along. On the defence the varsity was very weak. Carney, White and Colton on the second team coming through the varsity line for long gains. The same trouble was in evidence while Coach Haughton's team broke down Saturday. The line men failed to hold when Burr was pounding, and he had one of his kicks blocked.

The only encouraging feature of the entire scrimmage was the absence of fumbling. The men all hung on to the slippery leather, and did not drop it once. Waterbury juggled one kick which was going over his head when he reached for it, but with this exception the handling of the ball by the men on both teams was very clean cut.

The linemen were put through their usual breaking through drill under the direction of Cutts and Lieutenant Graves. Both the captain and Graves, however, kept Graves's attention yesterday, and he worked with Fish just as he had worked with Burr on Monday. Fish picked up the signals and had no difficulty in breaking through.

The varsity lined up as follows: M. C. Pierce, left end; Burr, left tackle; Kennard, left tackle; Parker, left guard; Gilder, centre; Wendell, right guard; Fish, right tackle; Wm. Pierce, right end; Fish, right end; Starr, quarterback; Goodnall, right end; Starr, quarterback; Gilder, quarterback; Wendell, left halfback; Rand, right halfback; Starr, right halfback; Gilbert, right halfback; Appelbach, fullback; Waterbury, fullback.

Hard work is carded to-day, as the coaches are far from satisfied with the squad.

ANTI-BETTING LAW MAY CLOSE READVILLE TRACK

While it will undoubtedly be the desire of the stockholders in the New England Breeders' Association that the Readville race track be kept on the map with meetings next year, yet they will realize that how they are in the hands of the directors, both as to the future of the plant and their cash in the plant.

Since the stopping of betting at the Readville track the value of running this property has been considerably more than the interest, and if it has been the men who have dug into their pockets for the difference it will not be long before the cause is the wrong side of the Breeders' ledger in the yearly statement.

All of the stock in the plant is nonassessable, and the financial loss to which it can have is in losing the value of their holdings. Lately there has been a shrinkage in the stock of the New England Breeders' Association with Readville as a race track.

On the other hand were the insurances that the association would be the owning of the grandstand used on the meetings, the buildings on the stalls and cow barns, and the land cut into building lots, etc., and the stockholders might receive twenty-five per cent. on their stock some time in the future; but is, if the whole affair could not be sold immediately to the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad.

With the association cut up into debt every year something must be done, and it looks as if the directors will have to decide in conjunction with the directors at the meeting next month whether the property is just what this action will be.

The only possible way possible would go the last track in Massachusetts, and to say that the future prospects are now the darkest in its history.

Notes of the Harness Horses

Soley Wolfson is by no means out of the matinee sport though his selling of Checkers, as he says to the new driver he will own a piece that will be in everybody's stir to and take notice when he rides down the avenue.

Miss Katherine Wilkes, who divides with Miss Leslie Cuthrie the honor of being the most prominent woman on the trotting turf, had not even a race since she was crowned when Sadie Mac (2.06½) dropped dead at Hartford on her Kentucky Todd (2.08¾) started in the Kentucky Futurity. He was distanced, and now Miss Wilkes feels certain that she is the only woman who has won a race.

McHenry is surely the "wizard of the sulky" in the handling of horses. Not only what he did with Consuma that let in in hopes that whatever the horse McHenry can make him over. If stopping, it is right to the stomach. Weeks missed a hard left swing, and then uppercut. Abe put right to the jaw. Attell so far had the best of the fighting.

Weeks Comes Up Fresh.

Freddie Falls Down.

ROUND THREE—Abe landed left to the jaw. Weeks put right to the kidneys and Abe put left to the nose. Weeks swung with left, missed and fell down. Weeks put right to stomach. Weeks uppercut with right and repeated with left to the stomach. Abe put two lefts to the mouth and uppercut with right. Abe put left to the mouth and blocked return. In a clinch Weeks landed right to the jaw. Abe landed right swing to eye. They both punched with left in clinch. Abe put right to the stomach as they clinched. He put right to cheek a second later. Attell put straight left swing to the nose, sending Weeks's head back. Abe swung left to the eye. They clinched at the gong. Abe had the best of this round.

ROUND FOUR—Attell put left to the eye and the right to the jaw. He swung right to the ear and repeated with the same blow to the jaw. He swung two rights to the jaw and then uppercut with left to the same place. He knocked Weeks down with a right to the jaw. He repeated the same blow and knocked Weeks down again. He landed two lefts and right and knocked Weeks to the floor a third time. Attell knocked Weeks down for the count and the referee stopped the fight, fearing that Weeks' might be badly injured, as he stood no chance.

LONGBOAT IN LONG, HARD RUN

TORONTO, Oct. 30.—Tom Longboat, the noted Indian runner, to-day will start from a point in Hamilton, if the weather and conditions of road permit, and run to this city, a distance of about forty-five miles, over a stiff road of hill and dale and through stretches of the most trying sand.

The sanction of the C. A. A. U. has been secured so as to make the record an authentic one, and the greatest pains will be taken to secure absolute correctness in every detail. Time will be taken at the several landmarks along the route to serve as beacons in future attempts and to mark the progress of the Indian.

EMPTY SEATS AT PORTLAND.

PORTLAND, Me., Oct. 30.—On account of the small house here Tom Sawyer and Jerry Gaines refused to go on in their scheduled six-round bout.

Unk Russell and Conley Pound Each Other in

HOT BOUT IN CHELSEA

In a slugging match Unk Russell of Philadelphia and Larry Conley fought each other for ten rounds at the Winnisimmet A. C. and the former was the stronger at the finish.

It was a gruelling affair from the start. Russell never let up in his slam bang style of ring tactics and was doing the leading from the first tap of the gong. Conley made some attempt to stop Russell by meeting him half way and to the surprise of even Russell himself cooped the Quaker lad with a right cross in the opening round, but it failed to stop him wading in, letting fly either hand as fast as he could loosen them. Conley was practically a busy evading Russell's heavy swings and trying to slip in a counter as Russell banged away at him.

Conley made his best appearance in the first round. After that he was a target for the punishment which Russell dished out. Conley was doing his best in the clinches, but Russell was the master at this game, and in the final rounds did his best to hold Russell off with a straight jab.

Each fought himself out in every round after the first session, with Conley going to pieces but managing to stay the distance.

In the second round it looked like Conley in a walk, as he dazed Russell with some hard rights to the jaw as the Quaker walked into him. He failed to keep close to Russell, however, after each attempt back with amazing strength, slashing in with right and left, and at the bell Conley was the one who appeared badly off.

Bal Round for Conley.

Conley had a very bad round in the fifth when Russell got him on the ropes and swung rights and lefts to the head and body. He used himself up from his own exertions and landed a kick at the bell and started off defeat. Conley was doing good work in the sixth till Russell got over a wide right swing which caused him to drop his hands, but Russell was to weak to put the finishing touches. In the seventh and eighth rounds Conley barely stayed the distance, as Russell found in Conley's jabs and attempts to uppercut and Conley had Russell treated at the bell, but Russell was little better off.

Conley made a good impression, going the last two rounds, as he kept away and avoided Russell, who was unsteady, and got over several well-directed rights to the head and did some effectual jabbing.

The other ten round bout was a bloody affair between Willie Riley and Young Freeman for the championship of South Boston, but only went seven, when Riley went to the mat and could not get up because of a strained muscle in his leg. Riley had all the best of it up to the time he went down, when Freeman was forcing him, but Freeman got the credit of a knockout, as Russell could not continue.

Charley Haighey of Lowell fared Billy McKinnon's brother, who substituted for Kelley, the missing market champion, and Haighey had the best of the argument with the veteran for six rounds. Eddie Ranahan of Lowell knocked out Jack Dunn, the Swede, in six rounds, but carried away a souvenir of a black eye.

Notes of the Boxers.

Johnny Lynch, the clever Cambridge featherweight will now be able to fight some as he has sold his knockout to Jack Stafford, the well-known baseball umpire.

Young Bill Rarden, the lightweight champion of Philadelphia and Jimmy Carney of Cambridge, the clever handler, has induced him to go down to Boston. The Kid can fight, but he can certify who have seen him in the ring.

To the Middle Classes—Canada has already established Limerick as a lumbermen out in Canada, and Limerick is now the home of the best heavyweight will be discussing sandwiches and coffee.

Ben Jordan, the Philadelphia featherweight who has been matched to box Eddie Sawtry and Kid McFadden on the Boston A. C. card, is now in this city. Jordan, Lenahan, Dooley and many others to town on next date. Jordan has several pieces of property in this city.

I will bet that big robust fighting Johnny Kilbane will be the next lightweight champion. He has already landed the articles of agreement for the bout with Abe Attell, which is to take place on the 1st of the fall, and with a few months in training Kilbane will be right there. He has a shoe, fight, and I feel confident I will score a victory.

Harry Gilmore, Jr., representing Packey McFarland, left for Chicago last night. Harry Manager McGarrity's offer to fight Battling Nelson for a purse of $10,000 and a side bet of $5,000 a side. They will have to fight 133 pounds ringside, and also that the club will have to guarantee the receipts will be $20,000 or more. They want at least sixty per cent. Schiller Park, the Chicago representative of the road organization, recently afternoon and that he was willing to put up the money for the match, but business unless a large attendance was assured. Gilmore left for Chicago last night and will attempt to land the match. Gilmore is also interested in a match with Gans, or the match will either be Packard or Attell on the same card. Gilmore is looking in New York for a few weeks, anyway. Most of the clubs will be as good as they can be now for a while.

Johnny Corbett, former manager of Young Corbett, is heading an association of those interested in boxing in Denver, and Harry Gorman has agreed to draw up a bill which will permit boxing in Colorado next year.

Four-round boxing clubs, now that they have been placed under the ban, within the city limits of San Francisco, are springing up at Oakland wherever a small hall can be secured. In fact feature of one affair, known as the Ashland Club, last week Michael Angelo defeated Eddie Miller.

Jack Morgan, the Indianapolis fighter, whom Johnny Gilroy has matched to box Young Corbett number 2 in a ten-round bout at Fort Wayne on November 15, Gardner is training with Kid Goodman. He expects a ten-round fight with George Memmo if he wins from Morgan.

Oh Sa, Louie Ping can see on Jack Twin Sullivan the other night and he will bet that on the ropes in the cooling room of the fighting men. Jack Twin Sullivan is now with a couple of soap and a bale of towels in Ben Jordan, Young Peter Jackson, carrying out Sullivan. How's the picking to-night? Jack Twin Sullivan: Fine, fighting, everybody and nothing doing. Young Peter Jackson: Is that so? Jack Twin Sullivan: Yes, I'm taking the soap and towels back to the dressing room. Young Peter Jackson: Oh, that's all right, where you'd rather be than in a dark brown study for the next twenty minutes.

JOE KELLEY MAY DECIDE TO TAKE TENNEY'S JOB

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—It will be decided to-day whether Fred Tenney will continue to manage the Boston Nationals next year or whether he will give way to Joe Kelley, who had charge of the Toronto team the past season.

Kelley will give President Dovey his decision some time to-day. He has been drafted by the Hub team.

Dovey is willing to pay Kelley a good salary, with an agreement to add $1,000 for each position higher than the club reached the season before. As the club finished in seventh place, it would mean an extra $3,000 should Kelley land the pennant next season. The chances look very good that Kelley will accept the Boston offer. There are several clubs after Tenney, the Pittsburg, Philadelphia and Giants being in the field. Dovey says if Tenney leaves Boston Pittsburg will get him, as that team was first to bid for him.

At the meeting of the National Association of Minor Leagues President Pulliam of the National League said that wherever an outlaw club or league invades protected territory the commission would see that organized ball placed a team in the same city. This means that the new league that saw fit to break away from the national agreement, such as the American Association, would find the minor leagues ready and willing to fight it out to the bitter end. This was a slap at the American Association, which talks of invading Chicago.

Pulliam said that he was utterly opposed to the farming system, and hoped the baseball authorities would cut it out in the future. It's a bad thing for the game, as well as those clubs who are loaning up with players.

BALDWIN GETS DECISION AT BALTIMORE

BALTIMORE, Oct. 0.—For fifteen rounds Matty Baldwin of Boston and Kid Sullivan of Washington faced each other, and at the end the referee, Tim Hurst, declared Baldwin the winner. In spite of great popularity of Sullivan here the crowd approved of the decision, for Baldwin had proved the better boxer and the cleverer general.

If Referee Hurst had given the battle a draw he would not have broken the peace, but judging it as he did from a purely scientific standpoint he could reach no other conclusion.

Baldwin never shone especially as a boxer. In Baldwin he found a man not able to stand over such smashing swings, but a better judge of distance, quicker with footwork and frequently as good on defense. There was never a moment that the men were not on the job, so the crowd got its money's worth of pure fight with not the least suggestion of a knockout.

The quickest round was the first, in which the men were taking soundings to find out if there was something doing every minute. In the second round sullivan ran full head of steam and went after Baldwin, sullivan scored to his stomach and Matty mildly protested that he had hit low, but never stopped working over a straight left that the Kid seemed unable to prevent colliding with his nose. While the rounds varied somewhat the same methods were used by both throughout.

WILL BACK TEAM IN BIG BIKE RACE

Eddie Root, the greatest six-day bike racer who ever strode a wheel, is coming to the Hub to capture that weekly grind at the Park Square Rink which starts November 11, and it looks pretty good for the ex Melrose boy, as he has teamed with Fat Logan, one of the toughest in the game. There is little doubt that the pair will be the favorites to get the big prize, but they will have all the other riders arrayed against them, and it will be the hardest proposition the champion has tackled in his career.

Root's manager is willing to post $500 for a bet that Root and Logan will beat Jimmy Moran and Joe Fogler or any other team in the big race. Any team which thinks that it can better Root and Rob Logan combination has a chance to come out and get the money.

The track is ready for the grinders to get to work on and the men are in shape to ride the boards, as they have been plugging away on the roads to harden up.

HALLOWE'EN CELEBRATION AT GILCHRIST'S

ALL VISITORS WELCOMED

Grown-ups may celebrate Hallowe'en by daylight to-morrow, if they are in the busy shopping district, notwithstanding the farm and country home is the natural place for the corresponding attention and the death of "broom october." A department store floor converted into a Hallowe'en festival will be one of the novelties at Gilchrist's, Washington and Winter streets.

From 9 to 5 o'clock to-morrow the fourth floor of the establishment will be the scene of supernatural mystery, in which all the visitors will participate. Everything that anybody wants in the line of Hallowe'en sports will be available for the entertainment of the grown-ups, with whom the festival has regained its lost popularity.

Tubs for Apple Bobbing.

There will be tubs for "apple bobbing" and long strings of the delicious fruit. From a booth barrels of Hubbardston apples will be distributed, so that every visitor may have one. The decorations will all be appropriate to the season.

Apples and nuts play an important part in Hallowe'en frolics, and the fruit means these edibles will be in abundance. "Apple bobbing" is the favorite sport. The person kneels beside the tub, his hands behind his back, and tries to lift the apple with his teeth. Or he may hold a fork with his teeth and try to spear an apple with it. It is needless to say that "apple bobbing" calls for a genuine complexion and frontlair that will stand water.

Another apple game calls for the apples to be suspended from the ceiling or door frame, and the aspirant, with hands tied behind him, must get a bite from one of the swinging apples.

The main idea will go to a room alone and sit before the mirror by candle light, combing her hair and eating an apple at the same time, will see the face of her future sweetheart looking over her shoulder into the mirror.

Old Games With Nuts.

With the nuts a favorite experiment is to place two nuts on a hot stovel or on the hearth near the blazing fire and name them. If the two kindle and burn quietly together the pair should marry and will be happy. If one pops and cracks and jumps, that one's namesake will be unlucky. If one burns quietly it is a sign of faith-ful devotion.

These and many more ingenious games are employed in describing the future by superstaunt in Hallowe'en games, and any of them for the visitors at Gilchrist's seek will be promptly furnished. The place pretends to the supernatural and ghostly, to the jocular and merry, and to the romantic tests. The decorations will follow that scheme.

As an incident, each of the buyers has decided to offer six articles at special prices for this day only.

PIANOS AND ORGANS. PIANOS AND ORGANS.

ROXBURY STORAGE WAREHOUSE CO.
WHERE PIANOS ARE SACRIFICED

Fighting the Piano Trust

The name "Piano Trust" sounds big, looks powerful and frightens a good deal. Here's the point: The "Trust" has a big lot of high grade, low grade or medium grade pianos on hand. We have been cutting their prices and cutting—cutting—cutting—and actually slaughtering their prices, and have been shipping the big Piano Trust pianos to us every N. E. State. We realize that we are making no money on these pianos, but are still in the ring and cutting to accomplish a purpose, and that purpose is "more" business, at prices that make the big Piano Trust stare.

Here's a marvelous list to ponder on to-day. Any piano in this list is a genuine bargain, and it is safe to say that the man or woman who buys a piano from this list of prices is not a real money saver. Roxbury Storage Salesrooms are famous for "Piano Bargains" and to keep up this reputation we clean out clear without regard to cost or profit every piano. That's why this statement how these sales must necessarily be sacrifices. Remember's how we have sacrifices.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, OCTOBER 30, 1907

Judge Moran by the Enemies He Has Made

And You'll Find the Character of His Foes Is the Best Argument in His Favor

Citizens of Suffolk County understand the situation in the contest for the office of District Attorney so thoroughly that they will not be deceived by the mere labeling of Walter A. Webster as a Republican and Joseph A. Dennison as a Democrat. They understand very clearly that both candidates are the candidates of Mayor John F. Fitzgerald and his political machine.

That that machine happens to be labeled Democratic is of no significance to the intelligent Democrats of Boston. They remember what that machine did one year ago at the polls to John B. Moran, DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR.

Some of the "Democrats" who spoke for the party candidate on the stump treacherously strove to defeat him at the polls. This is known to all men of political intelligence to-day.

Moran could have been the candidate of the Democratic machine for District Attorney at this moment instead of Dennison, if he had wanted the nomination. The men who are trying to beat him at the polls could not have beaten him in the Democratic convention had he gone there as a candidate.

But he preferred to rely upon the masses of the Democratic party and the masses of the Republican party, who, unlike machine leaders, want an honest and fearless District Attorney, than again to trust himself in the hands of politicians who had once stabbed him in the back in voting booths.

Mayor Fitzgerald is trying to defeat Moran at the expense of his party. He hopes that Dennison, already an "also ran," will poll enough Democratic votes to bring about the election of Webster, a Republican of the Fitzgerald type. A Republican of that type is not the kind of a District Attorney which the Republican taxpayers and rentpayers of this county want to see in office. They want the kind of a District Attorney who will exercise a deterrent influence at City Hall.

When a District Attorney prevents crime he is doing better work than when he punishes it. EVERY HONEST, WELL-INFORMED CITIZEN OF SUFFOLK COUNTY KNOWS THAT JOHN B. MORAN HAS CAUSED MORE FEAR AMONG CITY HALL CRIMINALS THAN ANY PUBLIC OFFICIAL THIS CITY HAS EVER KNOWN.

The best reason for voting for Moran is the character of the men who want to defeat him.

Don't Cheat the Waiter

He EARNS What He Gets: Only Foolish Economy Would Deprive Him of It

Whatever economies people feel disposed to make because there has been a panic in a few cities, cutting down the tips to waiters should not be one of them.

To the butcher, the grocer, the merchant, you MUST pay. The law does not allow you to economize by depriving them of their income.

For your meals you MUST pay the restaurant or hotel proprietor, because he possesses the means to COMPEL you to pay him.

But for the service the waiter renders you, which is far greater than he is paid to render, he has only your sense of justice on which to depend for his pay.

Every man who lives in Boston knows how great that service is. Without the waiter's competence, his interest in your wants, his willingness to do double service to oblige you, it would be impossible for you to enjoy your dinner or your luncheon or your breakfast.

He makes it his business to learn what you want, AND TO SEE THAT YOU GET IT.

He gives you cheerfully the advantage of his knowledge, which is great, and by following his advice, which is always yours for the asking, you will fare far better than if you tried to order yourself.

For you he works with his hands and his BRAINS, and however irritable or unreasonable you may be, his patience and politeness are never in the least abated.

For this service, which means so much to you, he ASKS NOTHING. He had no means of compelling you to pay him, and he would employ no such means if he had them.

With you alone rests whether he shall be paid or whether he shall not, and although you may practise many economies because a few banks have suspended, it would be unfair and unjust to begin with the waiter. Like every other wage-worker, he feels the effect of business depression far more than do any of his patrons.

Fewer people come into the restaurant where he works. Fewer order elaborate dinners or run up great bills. And too many feel that because they are a little poorer than they have been a splendid way to recoup would be to cut off the tip of the waiter, WHO CANNOT HELP HIMSELF, instead of cutting down the price of the dinner, which must be paid.

In Boston the waiters are a fine, hard-working, intelligent body of men, WHO MUST HAVE BRAINS or they could not secure employment. Their work is most exacting and exhausting.

Their wages are so low that unless those whom they serve make them extra compensation they and their families would speedily face starvation.

It is, of course, well to be economical and prudent in making all expenditures, especially in a time of financial trouble; but to take a workingman's wages from him, merely because he has no power to enforce their payment, is the sort of economy that no man with a sense of fairness would practise.

The Girl Under the Pompadour

By Winifred Black

THE pompadour girl must go.

A big Eastern firm has said it, and every girl in the shop has been given the chance to choose between her pompadour and her job.

The girls are real cross about it.

They say that a working girl has a right to dress as she pleases, comb her hair as she pleases and look altogether as she pleases—as long as she does the work that she is paid for doing and does it well.

True, quite true, ladies of the pompadour sisterhood.

I'd be real cross, too, if any one told me what color of ribbon to wear round my neck or hinted that I would please them better if I did my hair in a different way.

The firm in question has begun at the wrong end of the furrow.

It isn't the pompadour that makes the fool.

It's the fool that makes the pompadour.

A girl who is vain and silly and self-conscious enough to waste time fixing her hair when she ought to be doing her work will waste the same amount of time on a Cleo de Merode style of hairdressing.

A vain little goose of a simpering giggler who thinks more of her looks than she does of her work will be the same vain, simpering little giggler if the firm she works for makes her braid her hair in a pigtail or knot it up in a pug.

A pompadour fiend will turn round at the altar and fuss with the ringlets on her brow.

But it is neither the powder rag nor the pompadour that is to blame.

It is the woman.

A little vain, fuss-budget of a woman will keep a whole street car full of people waiting while she gets her silly little skirtcoats pulled up at just the right angle to show her silly little shoe.

But it wouldn't do a bit of good to put her into bloomers and boots.

She would turn her attention to bracelets or beads or dingle-dangles of some sort and drive a waiting world close to madness by concentrating the whole of what little mind she had on those particular fallbls.

I had a stenographer once who wore a big pompadour.

Ach, Himmel, that pompadour!

I got so I used to dream of it.

Whenever I was in a particular hurry for some particular work the stenographer was hiding somewhere attending to the pompadour.

Whenever I was especially interested in anything I was trying to dictate she always had to stop and arrange the pompadour.

Did I tell her to do her hair in a part?

I did not.

I discharged the girl.

I had nothing against the pompadour.

It was the girl who made me cross.

Get a new set of girls, Messrs. Ko-, & Co., get a new set of girls. That's the only solution for the pompadour clerk nuisance.

"If a Woman Hasn't Got a Man Under Her Thumb, Then She Has Him Twisted Around Her Finger"

By Kennett Harris

THE man in the apron overalls swallowed the last morsel of his pie and heaved a sign of mingled pity and repletion.

"I feel sorry for him," he said. "He ain't been the same ever since he married that there demon. That ain't a polite way to speak of a lady, but it's the best I can do for her. He's scared to death of her."

"I don't blame him," said the man in the checked jumper. "She'd scare 'most anyone to death. What does she do—take the bald-headed end of the broom to him?"

"I guess so," replied the man in the apron overalls. "That ain't the worst. She might take a broom, or a flatiron, or a rolling pin, or any old thing to me, and I'd a-sooner take my chances of dodging than have to listen to her holler at me. She's got a voice like that there saw a-ripping through a knotty log.

"I've seen him a-setting outside trying to sneak a look at his paper, and when she'd call him he'd jump like somebody'd kicked the chair from under him and shoot into the door same's a rabbit dodging into his hole. You can hear her for a couple of blocks against the wind."

Themselves to Blame

"WHY does he stay home and take it?" asked the man in the checked jumper.

"Where'd he go?" said the man in the apron overalls. "She'd go after him anywheres and haul him out by the scruff of his neck. He dassent say his soul's his own, poor devil! I know what I'd do if I was in his place."

"So do I," said the man in the checked jumper. "I'd take a club and wear it out on her."

"I don't know but what I would, too," agreed the man in the apron overalls. "I certainly wouldn't let a woman run me the way he does her. I'd do something. Say, ain't it fierce to see a man, a feller who wears pants and whiskers, hopping sideways and shaking in his shoes every time a hundred and twenty-pound woman opens her head?"

"It's what you fellers get for being married," said the man in the checked jumper. "I've got yourselves to blame for it."

The man in the apron overalls looked at his companion indignantly.

"What do you mean by that?" he asked. "I'll let you ever see my wife taking a brow to to me?"

"I don't know as I have," admitted the man in the checked jumper.

"Or buckin' me up in a corner and rubbing her fist against my nose?"

"Maybe not."

"Or standing in the doorway yelling names at me when I started out to work. Ever notice me licking my lips and rolling up the whites of my eyes and crawling along on my belly when she spoke to me? I'll bet you nor none of the neighbors ever knowed of her giving me anything but sweet smiles and pleasant words and good grub. I seen your mouth a-watering when I open my dinner pail all right."

Has Only Carfare

"I TAKE notice that you ain't never got nothing but your carfare in your pocket just the same," said the man in the checked jumper, "and that up at the monthly meeting you duck just as soon's the business is over. If you ain't uneasy about what the woman'll have to say when you get home you act like it."

"If I wanted to stay I'd stay," said the man in the apron overalls.

"Sure," said the man in the checked jumper, sarcastically. 'And if you wanted to go down to Duffy's once in a while and have a quiet little game of forty-five with one or two of your old friends you'd go, and if you wanted to buy your clothes yourself and get the kind you liked instead of the kind you'd buy 'em yourself. You wouldn't let no woman run you, not unless you wanted to. You'd ask me around to eat Sunday dinner with you if you darn pleased, wouldn't you, whether the woman wanted to have me around or not?"

"You come around next Sunday and see," said the man in the apron overalls. "I give you the invite right now."

"You're Married"

"I GUESS you'll have to excuse me," said the man in the checked jumper. "It ain't that I'm afraid I wouldn't get the sweet smile and the pleasant words and the good grub, for that matter, but if she'd wanted me I'd have got the invite before this. That's all right. I ain't blaming you; you're married."

"You're too sensetive, Bill," said the man in the apron overalls. "She ain't got nothing against you. And it wouldn't make no difference if she had. I want you to understand that my wife ain't got no under her thumb, like Larry's has got him."

"No," said the man in the checked jumper. "I guess that's true enough. But a woman's bound to get a feller some way. If she hasn't got him under her thumb she's got him twisted around her finger."
